Canada harbored Americans

The Canadian Press

The Canadian embassy in Iran harbored six American diplomats for three months and then smuggled them out when Iranians were preoccupied with their elections, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said today.

She said the Americans, who were outside their own embassy when students took it over, were agricultural and consular officials and their wives.

The minister made the announcement a day after she announced that the Canadian ambassador and the remaining three Canadians in the embassy have been removed until after the hostages in the American embassy were released.

She told reporters today she did not mention the six before for fear of the lives of the hostages.

Miss MacDonald said the Americans, Canadian Ambassador Kenneth Taylor and the three others left together, using Canadian passports.

She said she knew some journalists were aware of the hidden Americans "and therefore the danger, the threat, became greater all the time."

"It was only a matter of time before the Iranians came to know about this," the minister said.

Unless the American diplomats left, "the lives of our embassy officials would be very much in jeopardy."

In Brantford, Ont., where he was electioneering, Prime Minister Clark told reporters that he informed Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau that the embassy was sheltering the Americans a week after they got there.

He told New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent this morning, a day after Broadbent had condemned closure of the embassy.

Broadbent had said the government's decision to close the embassy was an objectionable campaign tactic.

The prime minister said he did not think Trudeau's criticism about the government's lack of toughness in the Iranian situation placed anybody in the embassy in danger.

He also said given Broadbent's reputation, the New Democratic Leader would not have criticized the Clark government for electioneering on the embassy issue if he had known about the Americans.

This morning, Trudeau commended the Clark government for harboring the American diplomats.

"This is commendable action and all Canadians and myself commend this brave work."

He said it is in the tradition of Canada to help people in distress. "If it happened in Iran, we're proud of our Canadians there."

Broadbent, apparently caught by surprise, withdrew his criticism of the closing of the embassy.

Story of the Americans' escape was first revealed by Washington correspondent Jean Pelletier, in the Montreal La Presse and was at first denied by Canadian officials.

Some 50 American hostages at the U.S. embassy remain in the hands of Iranian militants who are demanding the return of the deposed shah.

The six escapers — including two married couples — were identified as consular officer Mark J. Lijek; his wife Cora Amburn Lijek, a consular assistant; consular officer Robert G. Anders; agricultural attache Henry Lee Schatz; consular officer Joseph D. Stafford and his wife Kathleen F. Stafford, a consular assistant.

U.S. officials said the six do not account for the discrepancy between the number of hostages the state department has said are in the embassy — 50 — and the number counted by American clergymen who visited the hostages at Christmas — 43.

In Iran, as the usual morning crowd of visa-seeking persons gathered outside the iron gates of the tightly secured embassy in a quiet Tehran neighborhood, government officials scrambled to put together a brief statement.

The foreign ministry said it had not been

PC coast guard program called window dressing

Transport Minister Don Mazanskowski announced a multi-million-dollar, 30-year program to re-equip the Canadian Coast Guard in Vancouver today but the program was immediately labelled "window dressing."

Mazanskowski told a news conference the first five-year phase of the program will cost $250 million.

The minister said there has been a deterioration of coast guard equipment and a lack of attention to renewing the coast guard fleet.

Outspoken Canadian Coast Guard volunteer activist in Campbell River, Dr. Bob Somerville, said today the minister's announcement is window-dressing and won't mean any increase in coast guard facilities.

"All they've done is taken the coast guard budget and projected it over the next 30 years. This could change with the next government," he said. "What happened with the $40 million the Trudeau government promised us?"

He said most of the money for replacement of ships would be going to the east coast, not the west.

"Our 95-foot cutters are already five years over their original estimated life. They sure as hell should start building pretty damn soon."

H.O. Buchanan, regional director in Vancouver, confirmed that this is precisely what had been done. The budget had been projected over a 30-year period and did not cover any additional equipment.

He said, however, the new program is highly preferable to the method of replacing ships in the past when the replacements were done in a "feast or famine" manner.

Manzankoski said he will be in the Vancouver area all this week, and expects to have a report on his investigation into coast guard facilities on the B.C. coast.

The investigation was called for after the freighter Lee Wang Zin capsized in a fierce storm Christmas Day off the Queen Charlotte Islands with a loss of 30 lives.

Statements made at an inquest into the tragedy have been highly critical of the coast guard, particularly relating to the time taken to act on a Mayday from the freighter and locate it.

London Times banishes 'Ms.'

LONDON (AP) — The Times of London has banished the title Ms. from its news and editorial columns, the newspaper said today.

Trevor Fishlock, writer of the regular feature London Diary, said "That forlorn, fatherless and motherless little word Ms. is cast into the lexicographical outer darkness" in the latest supplement to The Times stylebook.

"This is a rallying point for commonsense," Fishlock said. "There are several reasons why Ms. should be allowed no air.

"It is artificial, ugly, silly, means nothing and is rotten English. It is a faddish middle-class plaything, and far from disguising the marital status of women, as is claimed, it draws attention to it. It is a vanity.

"There is an important battle to be fought for all women, not just a tiny elite," Fishlock said, but that "Ms. is one of the excesses of the revolution and should be junked."

Stadium for False Creek

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett made an impassioned plea to the private sector today for help in funding British Columbia Place, which would include a 60,000-seat amphitheatre, in the False Creek area of the city.

Bennett told a breakfast gathering of the who's-who of B.C. business that the private sector will be expected to help carry the load in financing the project, which will be linked to Vancouver's bid to host a major international transportation exposition — Transpo '86.

The premier said cabinet agreed Thursday to proceed with the building of the amphitheatre as recommended in a stadium report presented to the government Dec. 20 by Paul Manning and Larry Bell.

The legislature already has approved expenditure of $25 million towards the development of a new major sports facility for the city, which faces the possibility of losing two professional teams unless a covered stadium is built soon.

The premier said the federal government also is expected to participate in the futuristic dream much like it did when Montreal played host to Expo 67 and entered into a cost-sharing agreement with Ottawa.

Bennett would not nail down a cost on the over-all project, which includes the amphitheatre which the premier called "a theatre for sporting and cultural events."

The stadium report released last month disclosed that the amphitheatre can be built for a minimum of $100 million, depending on extra facilities and the type of roof design.

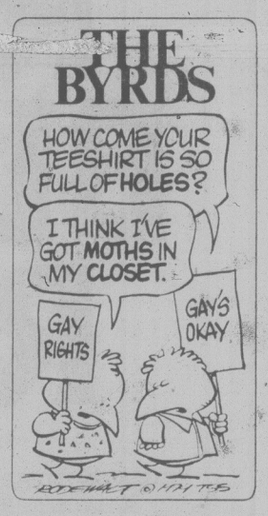
NDP MLA Gary Lauk says Bennett is just building castles in the air.

The proposed development would be in Lauk's riding of Vancouver Centre.

Lauk said he would welcome the announcement if there was anything solid behind it.

He said Bennett is raising expectations "far beyond the province's reach financially."

"He's only committed $25 million to what he calls the amphitheatre. For the rest of the project that he has sketched out, there is no financial underpinning."



New threat to Island farmland

Fertile Saanich Peninsula farmland is increasingly threatened by urban sprawl.

Warnings have been sounded for years that British Columbia — and, in particular, Vancouver Island — may find itself at the mercy of outside food suppliers if the area's small, independent farms are sold for housing and other non-agricultural development.

Now a new villain has appeared on the scene: the energy crisis, though it could prove a blessing in disguise.

In a series beginning today on Page 5, Times reporter Paul Minvielle reports that soaring fuel prices may dry up the flow of U.S. produce to the Island. That could give local growers a competitive edge, but unless government-sanctioned exclusions from the Agricultural Land Reserve are stopped, Greater Victorians may soon find themselves faced with outrageously expensive fresh garden produce — or drastic shortages.

Parrot begins jail term today

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Employees said today "it is nothing short of a national disgrace" that Jean-Claude Parrot, its national president, is in jail.

Parrot began serving a three-month prison sentence hours after the Supreme Court of Canada decided not to review his conviction of disobeying a special act of Parliament which ruled illegal a postal strike in 1978.

The union head recommended instead that workers stay off the job, a course they followed for a week before returning to work.

He has been free on bail since then awaiting the outcome of appeals against the trial decision. The rejection Tuesday by the Supreme Court exhausted all possible appeals and Parrot surrended himself to police late Tuesday afternoon.

After hearing the court decision at union headquarters, Parrot urged postal workers not to walk off the job in protest over his jailing.

Andre Beauchamp, a union vice-president, reacted with anger to the jailing of his boss.

"It is nothing short of a national disgrace that an honest and dedicated man, such as brother Parrot, should be sent to jail."

BCFP profit tops $97M

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. has reported the best year in the company's history with net earnings of $96.7 million or $6.35 a share, compared with $69 million or $4.53 a share in 1978.

Company president Ken Benson said in a news release today that the firm had a record year in the production of pulp, newsprint and coated paper while receiving higher prices for all products.

Sales in 1979 increased by $95.9 million to $800 million.

Benson said net sales included a gain on the United States exchange rate of $89.1 million compared with $62.3 million the year before and a net contribution to earnings of $2.51 a share compared with $1.64 a share in 1978.

He said the firm took advantage of the higher earnings and spent $58.3 million on improving production facilities to prepare for future demand and reduce production costs.

Fourth-quarter earnings were $26.2 million or $1.72 a share on sales of $222 million.

Beer $5.70

It is now official: the price of beer goes up Feb. 1.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen announced today a dozen regular beer will cost $5.10 plus 60 cents deposit, a rise of 50 cents a dozen. New prices will apply to products received in the liquor stores on or after Feb. 1.

Beer parlors will be permitted to increase the price of draft beer by a maximum five cents a glass.

The price of a quarter-litre glass of beer, which currently ranges from 45 to 55 cents, will now range from 50 to 60 cents in most premises. Licensees who have upgraded their premises may apply for a further nickel increase to a maximum 65 cents a glass.

Regular bottled beer will cost up to 10 cents more in hotels, pubs and cabarets, to a maximum price of $1.25.

Knew about probe: Murphy

VANCOUVER (CP) — A security leak may have taken the surprise out of an RCMP search of former broadcaster Ed Murphy's apartment, county court was told Monday.

S.Sgt. Ernest Brydon was testifying at the trial of Murphy and businessman Douglas Holme, charged with conspiring to offer a bribe.

Brydon said the RCMP investigation into the matter, which included bugging a cabinet minister's home, was supposed to be secret but in December, 1977, when Brydon arrived at Murphy's apartment, Murphy said he already knew about the investigation.

Brydon said when he showed Murphy the warrant, Murphy said, "I've known about this investigation for some months."

Brydon said when he asked Murphy when he learned about the investigation he was told, "In March (1977) and again in September (1977)."

Brydon was investigating allegations that Murphy and Holme conspired in 1976 and 1977 to offer then-environment minister Jim Nielsen $100,000 to use his influence to get 80 acres of Richmond farmland removed from the agricultural land reserve.

The court heard a tape-recorded telephone conversation between Murphy and Holme in which they said they expected to net $3.6 million by developing the land.

The taped phone calls included some that were indistinct and others that were laced with static. Defence lawyers Leonard Doust and Glen Orris questioned the accuracy of the Crown's transcripts and said they may challenge them in detail later.

One of the conversations as transcribed by the Crown reads in part as follows:

Holme: "We can make one hundred thousand per acre on the property that we can acquire. You and I share 36 and 36, 72 acres. We've got to get Nielsen to get it out of the land reserve."

Murphy: "Well, we can do that. Geez, that's three million, six hundred thousand apiece."

Holme: "We pay him one hundred grand to get it out and we get ourselves two million, six hundred thousand."

Murphy: "Yeah. At 36 acres apiece that's three million, six hundred thousand."

The court was told 36 intercepted converstaion said, to involve Murphy, Holme and others will be introduced as evidence.

The trial continues today.

Pesky Marguerite issue to be settled Thursday

The B.C. government decision on a replacement for the Princess Marguerite will be announced Thursday and the unofficial word is that the ferry Queen of Surrey is still a strong possibility.

The Surrey has been in Burrard Drydock in Vancouver since Dec. 6, undergoing a $7.5 million facelift for its assignment to the Port Hardy-Prince Rupert run starting June 1.

However, work has not yet begun on construction of additional staterooms or installation of airplane-style recliner seats.

In other words, nothing has been done that would prevent the big ferry from being reassigned to the Victoria-Seattle run.

If the decision is to use the Surrey to replace the Maggie, it will be the third time the government has reversed itself on the issue.

First the Surrey was to be put on the Prince Rupert run. Then it was a cinch for the Seattle run. Next it was put back on the Prince Rupert run when the B.C. Ferry Corporation directors joined their complaints to the those coming from the Prince Rupert area.

Apparently, the government may change its mind again.

It isn't an easy decision for Transportation Minister Alex Fraser.

His officials tell him no ammount of renovations will make the Marguerite fit for service. The possibility of leasing a European vessel has foundered on the costs — an estimated $3 million-plus per year.

If he decides to buy a vessel in Europe, he can expect a storm of protest from B.C. unions who want any replacement vessel built in our own shipyards.

If he decides to use the Surrey, north coast residents will scream that tourists are being given priority over an essential transportation service for British Columbians.

If he doesn't find any replacement, Victoria merchants will be up in arms over the loss of 1,200 to 1,500 big-spending tourists arriving every day.

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber said today if the government decides to use the Surrey for the Seattle run it would reveal a remarkable ineptness in transportation policy.

Barber maintains a good case can be made for refurbishing the old Marguerite.

"Once again I call on the minister to release engineering studies that supposedly back up government claims that the Princess Marguerite is not seaworthy," he said.

Fraser has said a decision must be made by the end of this month if the Marguerite's replacement is to be ready for service in early May.

Thursday is the last day of the month and Fraser is expected to make his announcement after the regular weekly cabinet meeting.

Help for handicapped

The ministry of human resources has agreed to pay for personal attendants needed to assist handicapped students in the schools, Greater Victoria school board was told Monday.

Assistant superintendent Court Brousson told trustees that the ministry has budgeted $128,000 to hire attendants in the school districts of the capital region.

The board will hire and train the staff and the province will reimburse it for any expenses. It isn't known yet how much money will be available to Victoria school district.

Community relations officer Bill Stavdal said most of the children who would benefit from the new program are now enrolled in classes at Pearkes Clinic and the Queen Alexandra Children's Hospital, both in Gordon Head.

It is in line with the "mainstreaming" philosophy of education for handicapped children, Stavdal said. Under the new policy as many children as possible with physical and mental disabilities are being enrolled in regular classes and special schools and classes are being closed down.

Reorganization set

Greater Victoria school trustees voted Monday for a major reorganization of the board's senior administration.

They instructed superintendent Allan Stables to establish a separate supportive services branch to provide assistance to schools for children needing special education programs.

The existing pupil services branch is headed by assistant superintendent Court Brousson, who also is responsible for a full complement of schools as part of his duties.

Board chairman Carol Pickup said the move reflects a new philosophy worked out by school trustees that aid for special children should be directed to the schools and the pupils shouldn't be segregated from the mainstream in special classes.

She noted that already this year the board has reduced the number of special classes from 26 to 16.

Brousson is to be reassigned and a new director for the supportive services branch will be hired, Pickup said. He had been heavily overloaded with his dual portfolio, she said.

Camsell tenders closed

Tenders were closed for refit work on the Canadian Coast Guard Camsell on Monday.

H.O. Buchanan, regional director, says the contract will cover repairing the damage caused to the engine room when she struck ice in Queen Maude Gulf, east of Cambridge Bay, on Sept. 10, 1978. The contract also provides for installation of more modern control machinery and updating accommodation.

He expects there will be a four-week review period before the contract is finally awarded.

The vessel received two gashes on her port side — one eight feet and the other five feet below the waterline.

Tanker, cutter collide

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — With six crew members known dead, divers today searched the shattered hull of a sunken U.S. Coast Guard cutter for 17 others following a nighttime collision with a tanker just outside Tampa Bay.

While 27 crew members were rescued after the 55-metre cutter Blackthorn collided with the 185-metre oil tanker S.S. Capricorn late Monday, one was found dead shortly after the accident and divers recovered five more bodies early today.

"As time goes by the hope grows less," Capt. Marshal Gilbert of the U.S. Coast Guard said. "But we still hope there may be an air pocket (inside the hull) and we might find someone alive."

Gilbert said the divers had to battle poor visibility and treacherous currents in the 15-metre-deep water where the Blackthorn went down.

"The divers are finding the situation very difficult," he said. "The Capricorn is aground nearby, there's a current and it's difficult to operate in an area where the ship is aground."

Gilbert said the cause of the accident had not been determined. He said weather on the bay at the time was "good, with visibility six to eight miles and a light wind."

"There was no significant weather problem."

He said the commander of the Blackthorn, Lieut.-Cmdr. George Sepel, had not discussed the collision with coast guard investigators.

But Sepel, who was reported to be on the bridge with his executive officer at the time of the accident, issued a statement praising rescuers.

Cheesecake bridges cheesehead rift

VANCOUVER (CP) — The rift between Bellingham and Vancouver was plastered over with cheesecake Monday as Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich presented a two-layer cake to visiting Washington State dignitaries.

The visitors came to city hall to make amends for a Bellingham Herald article in which Canadians were described as cheeseheads and Washington residents complained about B.C. residents who head south of the border to shop in American discount stores.

After spending 15 minutes admiring council chambers waiting for the tardy Volrich, Bellingham Mayor Ken Hertz, State Senator Barney Goltz, Western Washington University president Paul Olscamp and business representatives from both sides of the border went into the mayor's office for a closed-door session.

Afterward, the dignitaries trooped back across the hall and Hertz told reporters "We are pleased that the mayor recognizes the significance of the anti-Canadian newspaper article and the negative effects it could have on very positive relations."

Hertz offered "our deepest apologies for what we consider a misleading article on anti-Canadianism in Bellingham and Whatcom County."

"Any deep feeling of anti-Canadianism just does not exist among our citizens . . . We continue to extend our hand of friendship to Canadians and ask them to share the joys of our city."

Tory crib death easy to explain

OTTAWA — It's standard newspaper practice to write the obituaries of famous people while they're still hale and kicking — so they can be socked into the paper at a moment's (or bullet's) notice.

We have on hand the first known instance of a political obituary written before the government has actually died.

With a nice bit of perception and a little bit of luck, Warner Troyer, the CBC journalist, has on the stands a quick little book that explains how Joe Clark blew it all so quickly and so easily.

It's called 200 Days: Joe Clark in Power and any Tory who reads it will want to lie down and cry for a day or so.

How could the youngest prime minister in our history, after waiting longer than any government since Confederation to call Parliament, have only 33 days in the Commons before falling on his own sword?

Troyer makes a good case that the Tories in fact blew it all by August at their Banff skull-shrink when the argument of the financial hard-liners (Stevens, de Cotret, Murray) clearly routed the Red Tory school (Crombie, Crosbie and the two MacDonalds).

Having squeaked into power only because of the distaste for Trudeau, the Tories were about "to hazard everything on a colossal bluff": the assumption that the other parties were terrified of an early election.

The stupidity of the Jerusalem Embassy issue became to the public "a metaphor" for ineptness.

As it dragged on, "Canadians had been mesmerized by the spectacle of a prime minister who seemed, despite an evidently faulty balance mechanism in his middle ear, determined to venture again and again onto the high wire stretched above a cage of man-eating tigers."

Troyer makes the interesting point that Lowell Murray, who by late 1979 had become a combination nanny, philosopher-king and chief strategist for Clark, was in the end the chief architect of the destruction of the government.

Clark? He may have been the first Canadian PM "who seemed smaller than life-size." A man "of surprisingly small ego for a politician but of considerable vanity." True, I think.

To the public, Clark began to resemble "an out-of-control puppy on a highly waxed floor."

The goofs, when laid down, depict a government of high innocence searching for an accident.

When the cabinet was named, only two of its members had ever held even a provincial portfolio. Even worse, only five were given the same portfolios they'd been specializing in while in opposition.

Dalton Camp, in an elegant foreword, notes that by rejecting any of the old Dief ministers such as Hees or Woolliams "the Tories, used to eating their young, had now devoured their old."

Clark then spent five of his first nine weeks in office out of the country. When John Crosbie approached two senior Ottawa journalists for press secretary, Clark forced on him instead defeated Tory MP Rob Parker.

Clark named an inner cabinet without a single member from Toronto, British Columbia or Ne[illegible] when a private poll warned Clark that his support was slipping badly in Ontario, the PM ignored it.

The civil service, terrified at first by all the Tory threats, wondered that there was so little change. The Clark regime had failed to leave more than a few scuffs and patches on the smooth veneer of Fat City. "Its passage had been swift, its life short, and its impact slight."

An apparent victim of crib death, the toddler-Tory government was slipping and sliding all the way from its opening (Jerusalem) week to Dec. 13.

Troyer says people could forgive Trudeau his mischief and arrogance because they believed he cared deeply. He wore passion and dedication lightly; he was not embarrassed by it.

Clark? "At the end he resembled Ray Bolger in The Wizard of Oz — wanting to care, to love, to weep, but still searching for the sorcerer who would have given him a heart transplant."

About the best compliment I can give all this is that I was planning to write basically the same on Feb. 19.

Land reserve trim urged

The provincial government should weed out thousands of hectares which have no business being in the agricultural land reserve, a former member of the B.C. Land Commission said Monday.

Bill Ritchie (SC — Central Fraser Valley) said the agriculture ministry should look at removing from the reserve land which is not needed for food production.

Ritchie said there are many small parcels of land which never will be suitable for commercial agriculture unless "some day we're going to have the Oriental people come back and farm like they used to do many years ago on their hands and knees."

He said agriculture today demands mechanism, fairly high-cost equipment and "those little parcels will never be used."

He called for a study "into just what is the long-term population growth of this province is going to be and where they are going to be located, what are the eating habits now, what will it be then, what is going to be required in the way of foodstuffs, and where can that best be produced."

Ritchie suggested the study be conducted by the ministry, the universities and the B.C. Federation of Agriculture.

He said if the study he proposes is carried out, the number of applications to get land out of the reserve would be reduced dramatically.

Market signals

The federal government's latest foray into the Canadian bond market signalled a vote of non-confidence by investors in Canada's immediate economic future. To the voter interested in federal party election platforms it should be an indication that the country does in fact need tough economic measures.

The government had undertaken the largest ever cash-raising initiative by offering some $1.6 billion in savings bonds. Even though these bonds offered record returns of about 12 per cent, they couldn't hold their value. In an unprecedented move, the Bank of Canada stepped in and purchased some of the new bonds to prevent the price from sliding.

Investors snubbed the bond issue because they felt the rate of return was not high enough. Predictions of continued high inflation and high interest rates make people reluctant to commit money to long-term fixed investments.

Indeed the national inflation rate is climbing. For 1979, inflation almost touched the magic double digit mark with a rate of 9.8 per cent. That was up 0.8 per cent over the previous year. The purchasing power of 1971 dollars eroded by a further five cents.

At the heart of the inflation dilemma has been the federal government's inability to come to grips with flagrant spending habits. Past fiscal policies of the Liberals (now advocated by the NDP) were based on the principle of a stimulative deficit. They believed pumping government money, borrowed money at that, into the economy would pay off in increased economic activity and tax returns at a later date. As yet, the later date has not arrived.

The Conservative government tried something different. It introduced a budget that laid out measures to be taken over five years to halve the current spending deficit. The main thrust was to move domestic oil prices towards world levels in the hopes of reducing the $2.7 billion dollars spent on foreign oil and bringing the country closer to energy self-sufficiency.

Finance Minister John Crosbie's intention in levying the 18-cent a gallon excise tax and raising the wellhead price of domestic oil was to promote conservation, to spend oil price increases on finding new energy supplies and to obtain increased federal revenues to start — together with restraint over government expenditures — to cut federal deficits and restore confidence in the Canadian economy.

Although the increased petroleum prices were offset by an $80 tax credit for adults and a $30 tax credit for children, both the Liberals and NDP rejected those hard-nosed measures. Unless the next party to form the government is prepared to adopt some policies aimed at reducing mounting debt [illegible] Ottawa's attempts to borrow its cash shortfall on the bond market may be further frustrated.

Shutdown clause

It is about time the B.C. forests minister outlined his reasons for changing the wording of the standard contract used by the government when leasing forest lands to companies.

Tree farm licences are issued to forest companies for 25 years. These lengthy tenures allow companies reasonable security of wood supply, and in return the licence offers the people of B.C. reasonable assurance the timber cut will be used to further the manufacturing and job base in the province.

Under the old contract a company needed the permission of the forests minister to shutdown a sawmill, pulp and paper operation or whatever manufacturing unit the company had established in return for the guaranteed wood supply. Under the revised edition, companies no longer need the minister's permission to shut a mill. All that is required is a 90-day notification.

To have a minister of the crown part of any shutdown decision presumably ensured that the interests of the workers, community and province became a consideration in the event a company deemed such a measure economically necessary.

Simply to eliminate that clause without explanation seems unreasonable from the government's point of view. Could the reason be that there is something to the warnings of a shrinking provincial timber supply, and the government does not want to be directly associated with possible mill closures and resulting unemployment?

Image rewarded, not policy

"Every great politician advances himself by telling the people exactly what they want to hear." How to Get Elected, by Arthur Doyle.

Clark's policy unable to crack Trudeau's popular television image.

OTTAWA — To remark of Pierre Trudeau's election campaign that it is cynical is about as useful as to remark of Canadian winters that they are, on the whole, cold. Both conditions are self-evident.

To figure out what's happening, we need to ask, surely, why it is that Trudeau's cynicism is proving to be so successful.

He's offering us neither policy nor platform nor even, now that he's dropped the subject of national unity down a black hole, any commitment to any idea. Yet, if the polls are right, Trudeau is about to win not just a victory, but a whopping-majority victory.

Vote against

A handy answer is that we are voting, not for Trudeau but against Joe Clark's TV image. This answer, though, begs the further question of why image is everything in modern elections.

Some answers are suggested in the just-published book, How To Get Elected, by University of New Brunswick professor Arthur Doyle. It's both a mock-serious primer for aspiring politicians and a potted, modernized, version of Machiavelli.

For starters, Doyle urges politicians to ignore sentimentalities such as "effective administration, enlightened government policies or a particular idealism." Instead, a politician's job is: "To get elected, and to keep getting elected."

To get elected, just as for a lawyer to win a case or for a used-car salesman to close a deal, competence helps, but technique is everything. Wear dark suits. "Voters associate dark suits with authority." Never, never, admit to a mistake. "Voters lose confidence in the politician who admits to any degree of fallibility." Be entertaining. "The majority of voters only follow the political game for the amusement it provides."

Fun stuff all of this. It helps to make us feel superior to politicians.

Less funny, though, is Doyle's account of why it is that politicians must do all these ridiculous things. Rather than modern Machiavellis, it turns out, democratic politicians are marionettes dancing to the tunes that the public insists that they play.

"Politicians lie," Doyle writes. "It is not that they like to lie more than other people, it is simply that they must. . . . People are inclined to believe only what they want to believe."

Or again: "Most (voters) couldn't care less what the government does or does not do. Only a handful ever cast their ballots on the basis of an issue. Most elections are nothing but personality contests."

Ouch!

A kind of polite conspiracy exists in which we all pretend that elections are important. A few are: John Diefenbaker's victory in 1958, Pierre Trudeau's in 1968 and Rene Levesque's in 1976, all were occasions when the public cared deeply about who governed them. Most times, the public really could care less. Elections thus become occasions of sound and of fury, and of a bit of fun.

TV is one cause. It's reduced our attention span to about 30 seconds, so that politicians who try to say something complicated, as Clark is trying to do about our economic future, are talking to themselves. The death of ideology is another cause. With so few fixed beliefs on the go these days, it becomes easy for voters to change their minds, for instance, from less government six months ago to more government (a bigger and better Petro-Canada, for example) today.

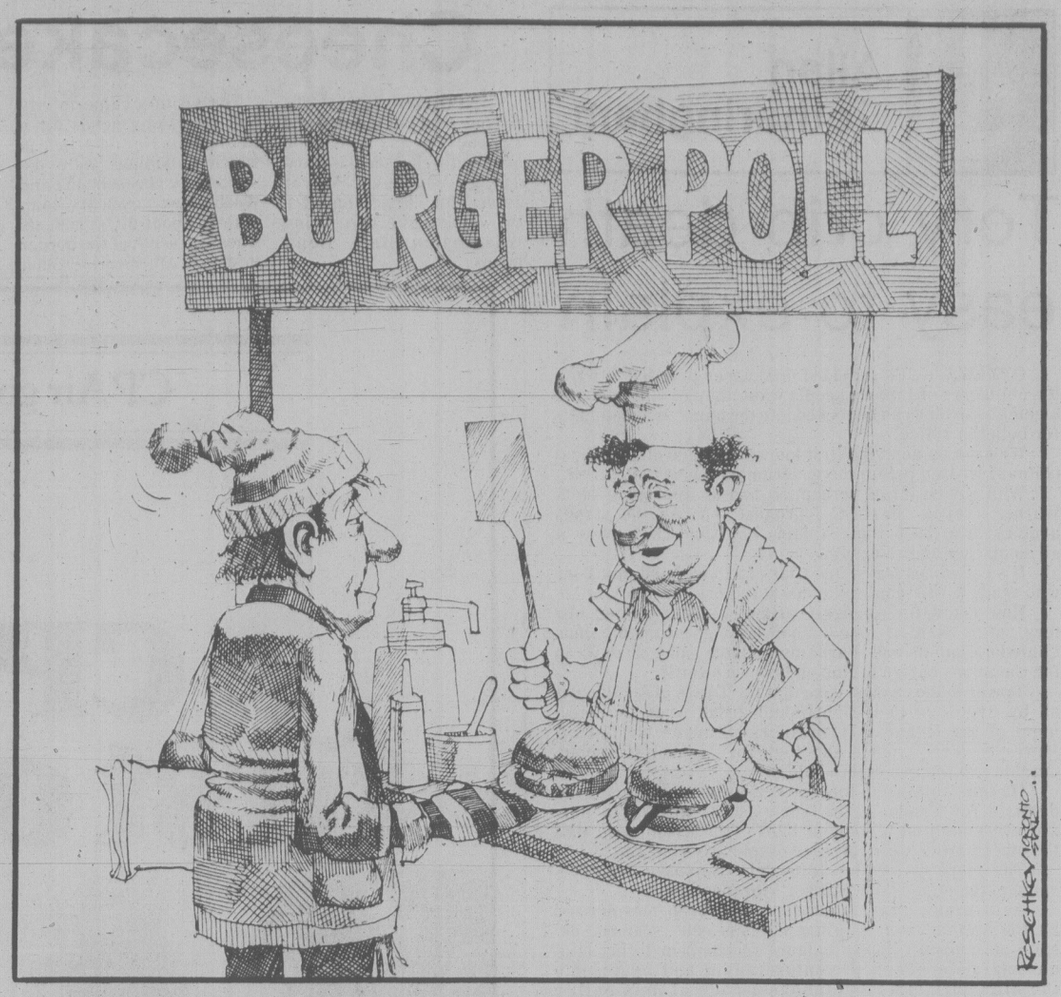
The root cause, probably, is that most voters have given up on representative, parliamentary politics, that is in a government that tries to be all things to all people, and have committed themselves to single-issue politics, or to doing their own thing.

To pro-abortionists as much as to Right to Lifers, to those who opposed Pickering Airport, say, as much as to those who wanted it built, to the oil companies as much as to Ontario consumers, it matters little who is prime minister. Each group remains confident of its ability to sell its case, through the media, whichever government happens to be in power.

Political sideshow

Elections thus have become marginal to government, a barker's sideshow. All they accomplish is to change the names of the politicians who'll be lucky enough to get their names in the newspapers for the next few years. The real problems aren't changed. Nor is the way those problems will be dealt with. Thus, despite Trudeau's vague talk of lower oil prices, it's safe to predict the oil companies will get what they want, by manipulating events, as easily out of him as out of Clark.

For Clark, personally, the sad part is that history, I believe, will give his brief government quite high marks, for idealism and for innovativeness, while Trudeau, when he eventually does retire, will do well to earn a "C". Today, though, we are marking our ballots in a personality contest. Trudeau's personality — his stimulating flashes of arrogance, his peek-a-boo private life — is clearly the most interesting. So he'll win.



"A Trudeauburger has lots of mustard and relish but not much beef — a Clarkburger is really a wiener on a hamburger bun — a Broadbentburger is union made and won't be ready until tomorrow."

Don't boycott

We Canadians must not stoop to symbolic political posturing seeking a boycott of the 1980 Summer Olympic Games. Such political tampering could too easily destroy the existence of the Olympics as we know it today. As a Canadian who grew up in the healthy Canadian outdoors I take pride in our international reputation in hockey, skiing, swimming, canoeing, and curling to name a few sports.

If we endorse good health, fitness and greater participation in recreational activities and are proud of our athletes' reputation let us recognize the Olympics as a worthwhile venture. An Olympic Gold Medal is the ultimate in the aspirations of athletes at all levels. Please let us enjoy sports for the comradery and satisfaction it gives us without political intrusions. Keep Canadians in the Olympic Games. — Tam Mathhews, Pearson College.

Scary socialists

I heard Ed Broadbent on TV promise an Ontario audience "a Western-European style social democracy." But does the Canadian voter realize what this means? Does he really believe that coping with life in Ed's Dreamland is a piece of cake? I can't say I have noticed a stampede of my fellow Western European expatriates flocking back to Paradise. Have you?

Having slogged for many years through the morass of socialist bureaucracies, I will tell you what to expect. You will be "allowed" to pay up to 18 per cent in sales tax on the purchase of your home — old or new. When tracing a lost parcel, you will first have to apply to the local police for a certificate of "good conduct and morals" before you are allowed to file a complaint with the postal authorities. When your father dies, your widowed mother will be told, more than a year later, that "you should have been able to live on $400 a month, so where is the rest of your income?" And unless she can account by official receipt for every penny spent over the arbitrary $400, additional death duties will be levied on the so-called "missing" monies. As a pensioned teacher your mother will wait in vain for six years for the raise in pension due her by law. Too bad that she dies before the bureaucrats get around to paying it out. And you, my friend, 11 years later, will still be writing and fighting for her just due . . .

This is the kind of social organization that charms Mr. Broadbent so much. Trudeau started the empire-building of the bureaucracy. I thought him bad enough. Now the NDP wants to go him one better. It scares the hell out of me. — Frieda Kerfott, 6244 Rololph Road.

Greater whole

It has been said that the whole is considered to be greater than the sum of its parts, but Claude Ryan proposes to reverse that assertion by postulating that the provinces are greater than the nation, thus effectively turning our present constituton upside down.

Hitherto, by virtue of its unrestricted veto power over provincial legislation, Ottawa has been considered to be the senior government and to have the last word. In the proposed "federal council", however, the premiers would sit in judgment over any federal action which, in their opinion, might invade provincial jurisdiction.

The proposal to transfer unemployment insurance from Ottawa to the provinces is surely a retrograde step. As a nation do we want 10 different systems in effect rather than one? Would it be fair to have a variety of rates charged and benefits paid to workers with essentially the same needs? Besides, it should be remembered that originally unemployment insurance was considered to be under provincial control and that in 1940 the constitution was amended to provide for federal jurisdiction by adding a new subsection, 2A, to Section 91 of the BNA Act. Incidentally this amendment received prior approval of all the provinces, including Quebec, so it is difficult to understand Mr. Ryan's reasoning on this point.

Second, I believe it would be folly to transfer authority over [illegible] to the provinces. There is enough disunity in the country without adding to it by getting rid of the national news and substituting different editions of the same thing. For instance, I tremble to think of what it would be like to contrast the broadcasts coming from Alberta and Ontario on energy or Quebec and Manitoba on sovereignty-association. Our program entertainment is not all that is to be desired now but think what it might be like if divided by 10!

Claude Ryan's program can only achieve the same result as Rene Levesque's except that the latter's will be quicker-acting. In speaking of the former Mr. Clark says: "They are clearly in the context of a renewal of Canadian federalism". Mr. Trudeau cannot possibly agree but dare not say so because Liberals must hang together. Mr. Broadbent says nothing at all on the subject, which is sad. Will no one in the present election dare to speak for Canada on this topic? — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Blood donors

Victoria Branch of the Red Cross extends a heartfelt thank-you to the residents of the Greater Victoria area who gave 13,481 donations of blood in 1979. Although hospitals in the area used 15,712 units of whole blood, the shortfall of some 2,200 units was brought about in part by a reduction in the number of clinics in the area in 1979 and an increase in use by our hospitals. Additional clinics are planned for 1980 with the goal of enlarging our donor population and providing increased support for our hospitals.

The largest number of donations came from clinics at Red Cross House every month, more than 22 per cent. Groups with notable percentages of the annual contribution are the Armed Forces with 18 per cent, University of Victoria with 13 per cent, and all the area's high schools which brought in 10 per cent of all the area's donors in 1979.

To all who had à part in this great contribution — donors, clinic helpers, sponsors and others — may I say thank you on behalf of the thousands who are alive and well today because of your help. — R. Couvelier, President, Blood Donor Panel, Victoria Branch, Canadian Red Cross Society.

Better roads

In the month of November, 1979, my great-aunt was innocently injured in an automobile accident while she was enroute from Merville to Courtenay. She was unconscious for three weeks following the crash and remains in intensive care. She is not the first or the last person to be a victim of the overcrowded Island Highway.

When are the people of Vancouver Island going to stop exchanging lives for money — when will a highway be built that will be adequate for the needs of the people who live there? — Ann Blackmore, Sandy, Utah.

Vic West traffic

More and more traffic from the Western Community is filtering through our community of Victoria West, making it increasingly dangerous for pedestrians to cross our streets. The police department has done a good job lately handing out numerous speeding tickets in front of our community centre on Craigflower Road but this is only a temporary solution. What we need to do is get more of these car drivers into buses.

I notice that Frank Mitchell, the MLA from Esquimalt-Port Renfrew, [illegible] the improvement of bus service to the Western Community his top priority. I would like to encourage Mitchell or any other politician, regardless of their political affiliations, to please help the Minister of Municipal Affairs, William Vander Zalm, make up his mind to do something about this long talked-about problem. It is unfair that we in Vic West have to suffer the consequences for the lack of planning in the Western Community, especially if the penalty is the death of our citizens. — Grant Keddie, President, Victoria West Community Development Association.

Recordings wanted

The Aural History Program of the Provincial Archives of British Columbia has several recordings of the voice of former Premier W. A. C. Bennett. However, almost all of these recordings were made after 1970. We are interested in locating earlier recordings of W. A. C. Bennett's voice for preservation at the Provincial Archives. We would also be interested in obtaining copies of recordings of the voices of premiers who served prior to W. A. C. Bennett.

Artificial gas

Imperial Chemical Industries was successfully making gasoline by the hydrogenation of brown coal in England in 1936 — gasoline which was then marketed by National Benzole and Shell-Mex and B.P.

As large hydrogenation plants need considerable lead time for planning and construction, I am wondering why B.C.'s Minister of Mines, Energy & Petroleum Resources has not already taken some action. (e.g. inviting ICI in for a discussion). According to a recent CBC report, he is now "awaiting advice from his scientists as to the best kind of coal to use." — R. G. Napier, 80 King George Terrace.

Go quietly, please

Through the media of your newspaper I wish to lodge a complaint against some of the civilian delivery personnel who delivered gifts of flowers and parcels to residents in Victoria during the Christmas season.

I was called to Victoria in late November, 1979 to help care for my sister and brother-in-law, both of whom were seriously ill. I was shocked and angered by the unthinking way some delivery people furiously rang the doorbell and loudly hammered upon the door when delivering flowers and parcels, causing anxiety and distress to my relatives. As a graduate nurse I protest such unthinking, "slap happy" action by these people and hope they will be more considerate in the future when delivering flowers and gifts to all residents of Victoria. — B. Joyce Woodhead, 33654 Homeview Street, Abbotsford.

What's in store for Saanich farms?

Fertile Saanich Peninsula farmland is increasingly threatened by urban sprawl. But a new danger — the energy crisis — could be a blessing in disguise, as Times reporter Paul Minvielle explains in this first article of a series.

Fruit and vegetable farming in the Saanich Peninsula and lower Vancouver faces the same marketing and cost problems that existed three years ago.

A Times study of the industry shows almost no corrective measures have been taken since the legislature's standing committee on agriculture probed the underlying causes of ever-rising food prices.

Although the committee's report was tabled in 1977, little has been done, prompting one Saanich grower to label the whole exercise "a whitewash of the supermarket chains."

Many farmers indicated they never really expected much of the inquiry but they still submitted briefs and appeared before the committee.

Despite the apparent apathy of government towards agriculture and despite the problems facing farmers — the energy crunch, a shorter growing season than U.S. competitors, skyrocketing labor and equipment costs, rising land prices — there are some signs of optimism among Island growers.

In a curious way, U.S. energy shortages could actually benefit Vancouver Island farmers.

That conclusion appears illogical at first glance, but to California growers it makes altogether too much sense.

Instead of easily-reached, lucrative markets for their ever-growing and incredibly efficient farming industry, B.C. and the rest of Canada now seem remote to Californians confronted by ever-rising shipping costs.

Until recently, local farmers were at a distinct disadvantage.

Their counterparts in California, Idaho and the central parts of Washington and Oregon, for one thing, enjoy a longer growing season.

In California, as many as three crops are taken from some fields in a single season.

In the Saanich Peninsula, only farmers working very small acreages can expect to get more than one crop a year, regardless of how mild our coastal winters may be.

The growing season south of the border and inland is also more consistent.

It's different here, says Ian Vantreight, who, with his brother, Michael, runs his father Geoff's extensive Saanich farming operation.

To Ian Vantreight, left, and brother Michael the future looks bright.

As he gazes at an overcast sky, Ian explained that at that particular moment, every potato plant in his fields was spending more time developing leaves instead of below-ground tubers.

"The plant thinks there's going to be a shortage of sun, so it develops more leaves to catch the available sunlight. When it's developing leaves, its root growth is slowed."

With that bit of elementary agricutural knowledge out of the way, Vantreight turned to the advantages still enjoyed by his U.S. competition.

For one thing, he said, American growers can count on cheap, plentiful water.

Irrigation water is measured by the acre-foot — the amount it takes to cover an acre to a depth of one foot.

In Florida, water is free. In Oregon's Umatilla Valley, Vantreight said, farmers pay $4 an acre-foot.

In Central Saanich, the rate for irrigating is a whopping $158 an acre-foot, or just a shade less than 40 times as much as it is in Oregon.

To get water, an Oregon farmer simply dumps a pump into the canal running by his property. No canal? Authorities will dig one.

In the Saanich Peninsula, the farmer can take water only when it's available, so he must build a reservoir, adding yet another cost factor to Island produce.

While Vantreight isn't ecstatic about rising energy costs, he sees the bright side of things.

As the flow of cheap produce from south of the border diminishes, Vancouver Island farmers will have a better chance of selling all their crops locally, even if they increase production.

The Vantreights already sell most of their produce locally, or at least in the province, with 100 per cent of the potatoes, 90 per cent of cabbages and between 60 and 70 per cent of cauliflower crop sold in B.C.

Many Island greenhouse growers, specializing mostly in tomatoes and cucumbers, are also able to sell much of their crops right here on the Island, although the prices they get are usually less than the government-established suppport price.

Growers now must also expect to be grilled about their growing methods by a public much more aware of the long-term effects on the environment and on humans of chemical pesticides.

Most small-acreage growers contacted by the Times freely admitted they don't advertise the fact they sometimes use some chemicals to control insect pests and weeds.

But when asked if they use chemicals, most farmers admit they do.

"quickly add, however, that they use only enough of any particular pesticide to do the job.

Ian Vantreight thinks the heyday of chemicals is close to ending, but for the time being a farmer can't effectively grow crops without them.

"We've gone through a phase," he said. "Five years ago, farmers who used chemicals and the chemical industry were totally opposed to the organic people."

He said that during this period, many farmers, usually on the recommendation of the chemical manufacturers, either used chemicals that were far too strong or used far greater dosages than necessary.

"But the chemical industry has taken a giant step backward," he said, adding that the industry is now much more aware of the effects of toxic substances on the environment.

Vantreight believes a totally organic approach might be feasible in some parts of North America but it's simply not possible on a commercial scale in B.C.

"You have to remember that only 5 per cent of the land area of B.C. can be farmed," he said.

"There are no large areas you can alter to another crop simply because some insect or fungus has moved into a particular field."

Vantreight sees hope in the new "organic pesticides" now on the farm scene. "The new chemicals are organic based and they break down more quickly."

Proponents of organic farming and gardening (almost automatically opposed to chemical weed or bug killers) agree that organic pesticides can help.

It's merely a matter of finding substances to do the job without harming the environment.

Some gardeners believe an organic gardening or farming program can solve all agricultural problems.

Use of properly composted materials can maintain soil health. Companion planting can eliminate many pests and often improve plant yields and health. This involves placing certain plants that repel insect pests around areas that need protection from those pests.

Corn, squash and beans, for some as yet unexplained reason, all provide larger, healthier yields when interplanted — that is, with the squash and beans planted between the rows of corn.

It isn't a new concept. The Indians of eastern North America always interplanted the three ve

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

If Parliament is very, very, lucky (and, frankly, the way things have been going, we are not optimistic) it will, in the course of this lunatic election, acquire another Gerald Baldwin. He or she would fall short of being the real thing, but we will be happy to settle for a reasonable facsimile, or someone with the potential to grow into the job.

The real thing has decided to call it a day. The Conservative from Peace River had actually arrived at that decision before the election of last May. Then 72, he was certainly entitled to take his ease, but he was bothered by the need to secure a number of basic rights that did not seem to be faring too well under the government of the day — the right to ask and the right to be answered, among others. So he changed his mind about retiring, and was resoundingly (20,749 votes to 6,292 for the Liberal runner-up) re-elected.

We are delighted that, even for a scant six months, the legislation the government of Joseph Clark was able to bring forward had to pass the steely-eyed scrutiny of Gerald Baldwin. He did not let his own party off lightly on matters he considered important and some members may even be slightly relieved at the prospect of being no longer afflicted by his dogged devotion to rights — the sort of insistence he brought to bear on the freedom-of-information bill when he feared it was straying from principle.

His open opposition to positions taken by Mr. Clark and his solicitor-general, Allan Lawrence, on the question of authorizing the police to break the law, was both appropriate and admirable; his motion calling for investigation by a parliamentary committee of prosecutions under the Official Secrets Act was granted the unusual accolade of all-party consent.

If there was anyone in the short-lived 31st Parliament of Canada who was clearly working on behalf of the public — as distinct from himself, his party, or that incomprehensible apparatus called government — it was Gerald Baldwin, the Member of Parliament who once said: "Frankly, if I was a citizen, I wouldn't believe a damn thing the government says."

We'll keep it in mind, whatever happens.

No teddy bear's picnic

Katharine Whitehorn

A leading drain-clearing firm in Britain recently revealed that the biggest cause of drain-blocking in this country is not autumn leaves. Nor failed pastry. Nor garbage that no one could be bothered to take to the bin; nor even disposable diapers from highly modern babies: it is teddy bears.

British children, it seems, stuff their teddies down the lavatory pan not only with incredible frequency but with incredible force; since, says the drains man sadly, it takes enormous amount of strength to get a good bear down.

From this, the firm concludes that the teddy bear must be the most hated animal in Britain; but I think they've got it wrong. At least, they have if teddy bears I have known are anything to go by.

I have met teddies with all the fur chewed off them, with one arm sewn on time and again after they've been hurled across the room by it; I know one with a long, frequently opened scar stitched across its tummy, from being the constant patient in abdominal operations.

You often see a teddy playing the corpse in detective games, with a dagger sticking out of its straw chest; you see bears with bandages round their head, or driving a car, or chatting up the rag doll, or keeping watch against sharks — and don't tell me those great jaws don't molest children peacefully lying in bed in an inland suburb; they would, if it wasn't for the teddy bear's protection.

Bears are people, in anybody's game; but long before they get to being actors in any play going, they are particular people. A baby shifts its attention from the breast or bottle to the mother's dress, which is part of her; then perhaps to one of those revolting little rags from which mother or minder tries in vain to separate it.

Next stage along is a beloved animal, a half-way link between mother and the world. And ever since Fraulein Steiff called her bears Teddy after Theodore Roosevelt, the teddy bear has been the favorite mother-cloth-person substitute going.

Teddy stands in for the mother who won't let you go out in the snow again; for the father who has just roared at you because your paper boat was made out of today's newspaper; for the aunt who puts you out of the kitchen like a naughty puppy just because you've spilled paint on the floor. One only has to watch children playing with their furry people to see how it goes: they take out on teddy what grown-ups do to them.

Most mothers have had the shaming experience, in fact, of seeing their own motherhood techniques played out by child and bear. A mother may think she has always behaved in a perfectly Spock-like manner, saying everything in a cheerful, matter-of-fact tone of voice; she may think she has kept a smile on her face and shown unbelievable restraint — until she hears the child saying, "Teddy, will you keep still — put that back AT ONCE! Teddy, if you don't pick that up this very minute I shall spank you — no, I'm NOT sorry, it was MEANT to hurt, you're a very naughty boy!"

I'm not suggesting, let me quickly say, that the thousands of teddy bears currently clogging our sewers represent a previous wave of babes flushed away by their impatient parents; far from it. I'm just saying that it isn't the bears, themselves, who inspire the hatred; the bears are simply stand-ins for the people who do.

It provokes the agonizing dilemma: if you see your child bashing its bear, should you snatch it away, comfort it (the bear), patch its alleged wounds and treat it correctly under the Geneva Convention — on the grounds that to the child the teddy is a person, and you must show it how people should be treated? Or do you reckon it's better that he beat the bear than his baby brother, and let the bashing go on?

All bears are scape-bears; they take the sins of the world upon them. If a bear is pushed down the drain, then it's mother, or teacher, or baby or daddy who's being rejected. The bears should not take it personally or get upset.

I just can't help thinking, though, of the poor teddies who don't get rescued by the kind drain man: the bears who walk miserably away into the darkness, plodding their way through sewers like something out of an old French movie, lost, rejected, alone . . . Hell, now it's me that's identifying with the bears; this will never do.

Stop Da Music! Jimmy Durante is dead at 86

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Jimmy Durante, "schnozzola" to his fans and friends for more than half a century, died of pneumonitis today at St. John's Hospital where he had been under treatment since Jan. 7. He was 86.

His death was announced by a family friend, Joe Bleeden, and confirmed by the hospital which said the comedian, whose career spanned the era of honky-tonk speakeasies to modern television, died at 4:27 a.m.

Durante, who had been in retirement since he suffered a stroke in 1972 that left him partially paralyzed, was admitted to the hospital Jan. 7 for treatment of pneumonitis. His condition steadily deteriorated.

Bald, wizened and energetic, Durante excelled in every medium of entertainment — nightclubs, burlesque, vaudeville, the Broadway theatre, radio, motion pictures and TV.

He earned a fortune and gave most of it away to good causes.

Despite failing health Durante managed to keep up his interest in show business by watching TV and practicing the piano.

For the past four years the comedian rarely left his Beverly Hills home, where he was attended by his wife, Margaret, and nurses. Most of his time was spent in bed or in a wheelchair.

It was a long and lonely time for the once gregarious Durante who usually was surrounded by cronies in the old days.

He is survived by his wife, Margaret, and their adopted daughter, Cecille.

Durante, the son of Italian immigrant parents, was a baggypants comic at heart who joyfully disassembled the English language and created havoc with music to create a delightful mixture of humor and pathos.

Quixotic by nature and generous to charitable causes and down-on-their-luck friends, Durante became one of the most popular performers in show business.

His private life was as quiet as his public appearances were raucous. He lived in a Beverly Hills mansion with a swimming pool. He unfailingly visited local race tracks when he wasn't working. It was not uncommon for Durante to find himself with a bet on every horse in a race.

His last regular show was ABC-TV's Jimmy Durante Presents the Lennon Sisters, a musical variety series introduced in the fall of 1969. Prior to that he starred in several series of his own.

Born Feb. 10, 1893, in New York's lower East Side, Durante left school in the seventh grade. He never mastered the English language, but turned this disadvantage to his favor by butchering words. Catastrophe, for instance, came out castastroke.

Durante left school to sell newspapers in New York City. His early goal in life was to make his living as a piano player.

"I'm passing the joints peeping under the swinging doors," he once said. "I'm thinking the swellest job is the guy banging the piano in a saloon."

By age 17 — after a few lessons — Durante found himself playing old-time piano in a Coney Island bar.

In 1923 he formed an act with Lou Clayton and Eddie Jackson which was featured on Broadway and in cabarets as "Clayton, Jackson and Durante."

Durante emerged as the star of the trio when he began ad libbing jokes at the keyboard.

He made his first movie in 1931 and became a film favorite, appearing in motion pictures without his partners. But he remained loyal to Clayton and Jackson by insisting they work with him in personal appearances.

Clayton died of cancer in 1950 with Durante at his side. Long after Jackson had ceased to contribute to the act, Durante kept him as a side-kick in his TV shows.

Durante's trademarks — in addition to his prominent nose — were such songs as Inka Dinka Do and I Know Darn Well I Can Do Without Broadway, But Can Broadway Do Without Me? He loved to interrupt his own act by bellowing the catch phrase, "Stop Da Music."

He was a modest man who projected a vulnerable image, signing off his radio and TV shows with: "Goodnight, Mrs. Calabash, wherever you are."

He once explained that Mrs. Calabash was a reference to his first wife, Maud, who died in 1943.

Durante starred in such films as Two Girls and a Sailor, Ziegfeld Follies, Music for Millions and The Cuban Love Song. His stage hits included The New Yorker, Show Girl, Jumbo and Strike Me Pink.

The comedian had the distinction of having his nose-print imbedded in the forecourt of Grauman's Chinese Theater where other stars left their handprints and footprints.

"Love me, love my nose," Durante was fond of saying.

Actors drive him crazy, says Darren McGavin

scott's world
by vernon scott

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Darren McGavin, the TV series veteran who stars in the new The Martian Chronicles miniseries, is as much businessman as actor, devoting most of his non-acting days to real estate and other investments.

Personally, too, he prefers to spend his time with businessmen and show business executives to actors. Actors, he says, drive him crazy by limiting conversation to themselves.

McGavin, who starred in three weekly series — Riverboat, The Outsider and The Night Stalker — has been married to former actress Kathie Browne for nine years.

Kathie now is McGavin's business partner and almost every day when he is not employed in a movie or TV show, they share a 4 x 8-foot desk in their offices in west Hollywood.

Home is a large English provincial establishment on generous grounds in the exclusive Coldwater Canyon area of Beverly Hills. The house, surrounded by lush gardens, has only two bedrooms and is exquisitely furnished.

The McGavins have gathered antiques from various parts of the world along with objects d'art which impress the visitor. Especially beautiful is Darren's collection of Eskimo sculpture.

A real treat are the couple's Egyptian pieces, including an ancient and genuine sculpting of the head of a pharaoh.

Much of Darren's free time is spent in his den in front of the fireplace — one of four in the house. The room, complete with a wet bar, is decorated with memorabilia collected over the years, including New Guinea art carvings bought in Australia and old English theater posters.

The actor laments the fact that he doesn't get much exercise. He seldom goes for a dip in the family swimming pool, saying it is too costly to heat.

"It comes to about $600 a year just to warm up," he says. "Heck, you can fly to Tahiti for that kind of money."

The childless McGavins own a pair of stray cats. One of them, Black Cat, moved in several years ago. The other, Nipper, adopted Darren on a movie location in Nova Scotia and has been with them ever since.

Kathie does the family cooking and the cleaning up, too. The McGavins don't believe in domestic help. Nor is Darren convinced that a man's place is in the kitchen. He doesn't even barbecue.

Tel's earnings top $51 million

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. achieved its objectives in 1979 with net earnings of $51.8 million or $1.92 a share compared with $33.7 million or $1.55 a share the previous year.

The company said in a news release Monday that operating revenues last year increased by 14 per cent to $656.9 million from $576.2 million in 1978, reflecting an increase in long-distance calling and a record gain in telephones placed in service.

"I believe it is significant that our 1979 objective was achieved without need for rate relief," said Gordon MacFarlane, chairman and chief executive officer.

"We must be conscious of the continuing economic uncertainty, however, and carefully weigh the effects of high interest rates on additions we must make to our telephone plant."

Operating expenses increased by 21 per cent over 1978 to $479.8 million, the company said, with a significant factor the expenses resulting from the first phase of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission's inquiry into costing and accounting procedures.

MacFarlane also said that earnings from the recently-acquired manufacturing subsidiary AEL Microtel Ltd. were included in the annual report for the first time. AEL's net earnings for the three months since acquisition were $1.9 million.

$30,000 ice cube an energy saver

OTTAWA (CP) — Public works officials are spending $30,000 on a giant ice cube they believe could be the energy-saver of the future.

Called Project Icebox, the plan is to cool government buildings during the summer with ice blocks the size of bulldozers or larger.

The iceboxes would be outside the buildings, insulated to prevent melting and methods would be designed to transfer the cool air into the buildings.

The experiment is being conducted at Carleton University and plans are underway for a pilot study which will use the icebox to cool a building.

Capital costs are much lower than for conventional cooling equipment, public works officials say, and running costs, as far as fuel is concerned, are virtually nil.

Canada smuggles Americans in Iran informed of the departure of the remaining embassy skeleton staff.

A number of Western diplomats interviewed by telephone said they had no advance warning of the Canadian government decision and were unaware of the reasons for the swift move.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadegh, after summoning The Canadian Press to his offices for an interview, abruptly changed his mind and failed to appear.

However, he later told a Tehran newspaper: "We cannot prevent those countries that want to close their embassies in Iran."

The ministry statement noted that 200 Iranian students who had completed applications and paid fees to enter Canadian schools were to pick up visas today at the embassy.

The New Zealand embassy is to handle emergency matters on behalf of the about 50 Canadian citizens still in Iran. Most of those are married to Iranian citizens.

Clark and Miss Macdonald said the Canadians and Americans are safe and will return home shortly.

The two, talking to reporters in two different cities, said the Americans arrived at the embassy Nov. 5, the day after the seizure of their own embassy.

Clark said: "The Americans were never captured. They heard of the seizure of their embassy and they came to ours for sanctuary."

Clark said on an radio show that he regrets the matter became public. "These are things one can't control."

When a caller said he was worried the news might endanger the remaining American hostages, Clark replied: "That's very much my concern too . . ."

Miss MacDonald disclosed that Canadians have been increasingly concerned about the safety of the people in the Canadian embassy.

"We knew every day that the danger was becoming greater," she said.

"We had been looking for a solution to have them leave the country during the past three months.

"One of the things that was brought to our attention, that we brought to the attention of our ambassador, was that that was a time when the country was occupied by its own internal election and therefore we were able to move."

The Iranians elected a new president last week.

Miss MacDonald said when she made her announcement Monday about the closing of the embassy she did not mention the six Americans because she was concerned for the safety of the hostages in the American embassy. Her announcement said the Canadians were being removed for their own safety.

Clark said he never had any doubt about the correctness of Canada's action. He would have helped any country in the same position.

A Washington radio station played the Canadian national anthem, and calls of appreciation flooded into the Canadian Embassy today at the news of Canada's role in getting six U.S. Embassy employees out of Iran.

FLQ terrorist never arrested

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal police anti-terrorist squad chose not to arrest a prime suspect in the kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross during the 1970 October Crisis, even though the English-speaking terrorist was quickly identified and eventually traced to a hideout, says the lawyer for the Keable inquiry into police wrongdoing.

Nigel Barry Hamer, who was named as a suspect last year by an opposition member in the Quebec national assembly, was never arrested or charged.

He has been referred to as "Mr. X" and the "sixth man," because only five former Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists have been officially identified as Cross's kidnappers.

But Hamer's name appeared on a short list of four prime suspects by Oct. 6, 1970, a day after Cross was kidnapped by the FLQ's Liberation Cell, lawyer Mario Bilodeau said today at the Keable inquiry.

Two of the suspects on the short list were arrested and passed througha police lineup, attended by Mrs. Cross and her maid, who were eyewitnesses to the abduction. But Hamer and another suspect were not arrested, said Bilodeau.

The lawyer did not immediately produce any documents to back up his statements, although the inquiry has been questioning police and former terrorists in private for some time.

Bilodeau made his comments while elaborating on testimony by Carole Devault, a former police informer in terrorist ranks.

Name needed for Crystal ballroom

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis is asking the public to suggest names for the new ballroom at the Crystal Garden.

Curtis said today several groups have applied to book the "Crystal ballroom," and that is causing considerable confusion with the ballroom in the Empress Hotel.

Name suggestions should be submitted within the next week to the Provincial Capital Commission, 1002 Wharf, Victoria.

Virus link in artery disease

St. PETERSBURG BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Medical investigators have turned up an intriguing new lead in their effort to identify the causes of hardening of the arteries, the progressive disease that sets the stage for heart attack and stroke.

Cornell University experiments with chickens suggest a herpes virus similar to those common in humans may be implicated in the artery disease known to doctors as atherosclerosis.

Although several factors have been associated with the condition in which the arteries become narrowed by a buildup of fat and other material, Dr. C. Richard Minick said these factors cannot explain more than half the atherosclerosis cases.

"There are five herpes viruses that are known to affect man and it seems to us that there is a very real possibility, although not proven or established, that these viruses might be important somehow in arterial disease and atherosclerosis in man."

If herpes or other viruses can be linked to artery disease in humans, Minick said the ultimate objective might be to try to develop a vaccine to block the virus.

Reinstate Peacock: LRB

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board ordered Monday that Bob Peacock be reinstated with full pay as a B.C. Ferry employee at Horseshoe Bay in West Vancouver.

The board ruled that Peacock, a member of the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union, did not conspire in the Sept. 6 shutdown of the Departure Bay to Horseshoe Bay section of the system.

The corporation said Peacock instigated the walkout, which was not authorized by the union leadership. It asked the board to rule there was a conspiracy among activists evident in telephone calls between the Horseshoe Bay home of corporation employee Eileen Hall and a motel in Victoria where the union had its bargaining headquarters.

Peacock was at the home with shop steward Patricia Broome and the corporation alleged Peacock either took part in the calls or counselled Broome to make them.

The three-member panel under board chairman Don Munroe said the case against Peacock was almost entirely circumstantial, so he should not be singled out.

The board found Hall, Broome and Peacock had been drinking when Broome got angry about the slow progress of negotiations, got into an excitable mood and began placing the calls of her own volition.

"Peacock didn't really take her seriously and played no part in what she was saying or doing," said the ruling. "Eventually Broome went home, Peacock passed out on a couch (where he awoke the next morning too late to go to work)."

The board also lifted a two-week suspension imposed on another union member, Lloyd Thornhill, but refused to interfere with the two-week suspension of a third employee, Robin Holmgren of Departure Bay.

The board said there was no doubt Holmgren, chairman of the union's Departure Bay local, was the ringleader in the walkout there.

TOWN TALK

Dislike of the federal Liberal and Conservative campaign commercials seems to be widespread among voters. Nobody likes the ads which show Pierre Trudeau and Joe Clark in ugly, awkward poses. But they could be worse.

There's a television commercial in the American election campaign which is a lot harsher than the Canadian variety. The 30-second spot is aimed at a number of liberal senators.

It opens with a shot of a large chunk of baloney on a cutting board. Suddenly a cleaver cuts through the meat and a voice intones: "One very big piece of baloney is Birch Bayh telling us he's fighting inflation."

The slice of baloney has a price tag of $46 billion, the amount of "deficit spending Bayh voted for last year alone."

The ad, sponsored by a national conservative group, is being used against the Indiana Democrat and four other liberal Senators. Similar ads are being used against Ted Kennedy.

You have to hand it to the officials at Gillain Manor. They have patience in abundance.

It seems someone ripped out 29 cement slabs from a sidewalk on the grounds of the alcoholic treatment centre in North Saanich.

To the Manor shorn went the Sidney Mounties, hot to trot but the trail was cold. Police were told the slabs had been taken around Jan. 17, eight days before the theft was reported.

Why so long? Officials thought someone was playing a prank, but when the slabs failed to materialize they thought they'd better report it.

Among the newsmen turfed out of revolution-ravaged Afghanistan this week was Richard Hull, 33, a native of Victoria working with ABC television as a cameraman.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hull, 9156 Mainwaring, Central Saanich, last heard from him a little over a week ago when he phoned from London to say he'd been asked to cover events in Afghanistan.

They learned through press reports he'd been expelled along with reporter Jacques Grenier of Montreal and Barry Fox of Northern Ireland, the other members of the three-man ABC crew.

The Hulls aren't concerned. They are getting inured to their son's adventures.

Recently he was in Iran filming but as in this case got booted out when the Khomeini regime banned the American media from the country.

An ancient tradition has died. Members of the Legislative Press Gallery voted Monday for an anything-goes policy in the gallery quarters.

For decades, the unwritten rule has been that anything said in the gallery was treated as off the record unless specifically stated otherwise.

That meant MLAs felt free to wander in and chew the political fat without fear of being quoted. Now, they'll have to take their chances.

The move is considered the latest goosebump in the chilly relations between premier and press.

Elected president at the gallery's annual meeting was Times reporter and columnist Jake Banky. CBC cameraman Ron Thompson was re-elected vice-president and Vancouver Sun reporter Edie Austin was chosen secretary-treasurer.

No, the Canadian armed forces haven't succumbed to the high prices of silver. The silver, representing a not-so-small fortune, is being kept in a safer and less conspicuous place.

He was one of about 60 who joined in the search for Timothy and Joanna Padmore of 1315 Richardson and Jason Wale of 3235 Weald.

An unmarked blue garbage truck provided rush-hour drivers with a trashy spectacle on Blanshard Street the other morning.

The overloaded vehicle trailed old newspapers and other rubbish all the way from Fort up to Fisgard as the wind whipped off the top layer of junk on the front-loading vehicle.

The driver seemed oblivious to the mess he created, but anyone following was in danger of being blinded by the flying garbage.

Isn't there a law about overloading and securing the load on a truck?

Last-minute rush of Rhinos stampedes Island ridings

By NORM GIDNEY

Last-minute candidacies by a Saanich businessman and a Victoria licensed practical nurse have ensured the Rhinoceros Party will have a nearly-full slate on Vancouver Island in the federal election.

Robert Maddocks, president of Argosy Business Services Ltd., filed his nomination papers seven minutes before the 2 p.m. Monday deadline to qualify as a candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich.

Kirk Higgins entered the race as a Rhino in Victoria, another last-minute candidate, but he couldn't be found later.

In Nanaimo-Alberni, Frank (Teepee Red) Coffey of Ganges on Salt Spring Island is the candidate of the Quebec-based party while Louis (Crowbird) Lesosky is the Rhino man in neighboring Cowichan-Malahat.

Only the north Island riding of Comox-Powell River is deprived of a Rhino standard-bearer. Nominations closed there a week ago as it is one of the remote ridings with early deadlines.

Except for Maddocks, the other three Rhinoceros candidates emulate their namesake — they're elusive and hard to track down.

A couple of them appear to have retreated into the hills of Salt Spring Island, or wherever it is that rhinos go when threatened with news coverage.

Half an hour of phoning failed to find a telephone listing on Vancouver Island for Coffey or Higgins. Higgins isn't in the city directory, either.

The Nanaimo Free Press had a short wire story last week in which Coffey declared he was running and said he was from Ganges, but across town at the Nanaimo Times nobody had heard of Teepee Red.

A Frank Paine had sauntered into their newsroom last week and said he was the Rhino for Nanaimo, but at 2 p.m. Monday it was Coffey on the line with his nomination papers.

He apparently slipped into town unnoticed, filed his papers and left on the next ferry. The Free Press was still trying to track him down late Monday.

A different Coffey on Salt Spring said lots of people have been after Teepee Red lately. He'd had three calls already from individuals looking for him. The sheriff had also been sniffing around last spring.

Crowbird Lesosky left only a Ganges post office box number when he filed his papers in Duncan for Cowichan-Malahat.

There is a big sign in Fulford near the Salt Spring ferry terminal warning that rhinos cross the road there.

A Salt Spring Island conspiracy? The Cowichan-Malahat election clerk suggested: "It's Salt Spring Island, you know. A lot of free spirits over there."

There's a Lesosky on the Fulford-Ganges road, and the small boy who answered his telephone Monday afternoon confirmed Lesosky was, indeed, a candidate although he was not at home.

What does Crowbird do? "I don't really know," he said.

Maddocks made the biggest splash when he filed his papers at the Esquimalt-Saanich returning office in McKenzie Mall.

"We got a charge," said one official. She said Maddocks outlined a number of Rhino western policies, including a tunnel to Japan. He gave a doghouse as his campaign office.

"After a while we just stopped writing," she said.

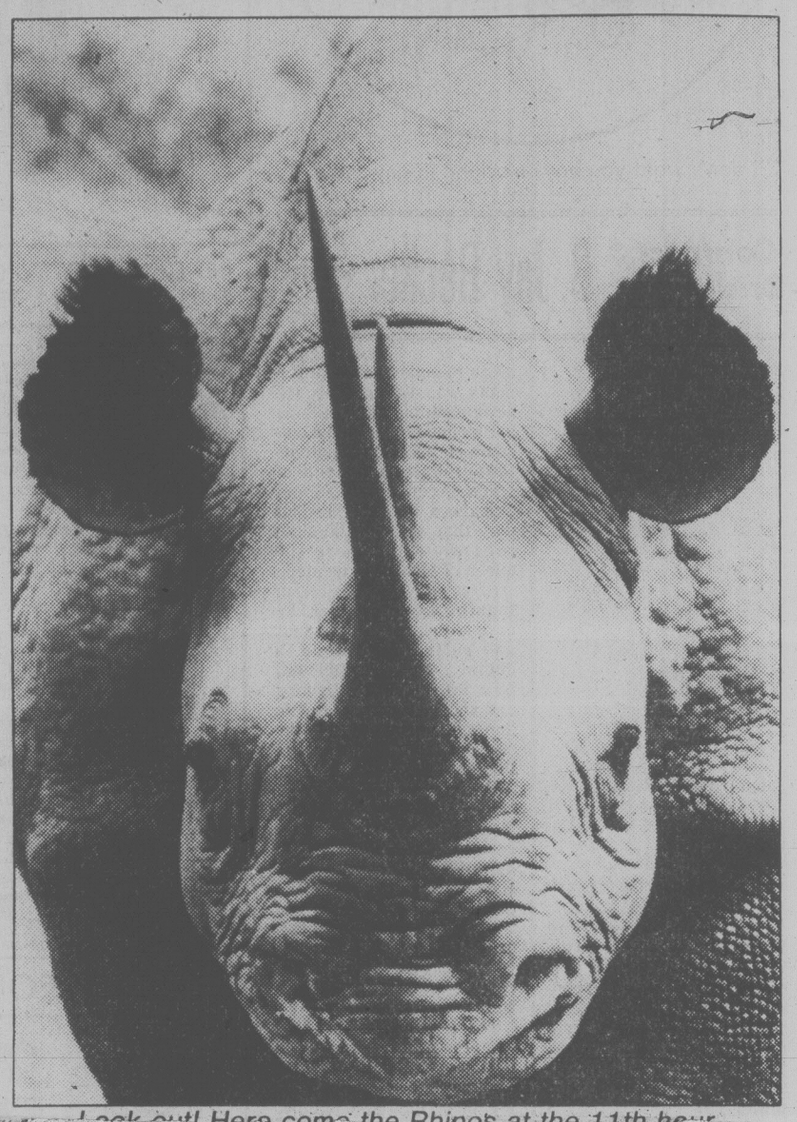
It's an expensive joke for Rhinos. They must deposit $200 when they file their nominations, which is returned only if the candidate gets 15 per cent of the votes.

Maddocks said he had no trouble getting 25 signatures on his nomination papers.

"We had close to 50 people clamoring to sign. Apathy is rampant."

President of an accounting firm, Maddocks said he got the nomination over other contenders because he spelled "Esquimalt-Saanich" and "rhinoceros" with only two mistakes. Policies?

"Our big one for Esquimalt-Saanich is we want to make Petrocan in charge of public toilets. There aren't any in Saanich and Petrocan has the administrative and operational expertise."



Look out! Here come the Rhinos at the 11th hour

Woman, 99, rescued

A 99-year-old Oak Bay woman escaped unharmed after a neighbor thawing a water pipe with a propane torch inadvertently set her house on fire Monday afternoon.

About $30,000 damage was done to the house at 321 King George Terrace owned by Henrietta Duffield.

An Oak Bay fire department spokesman said Scott Judson, who lives next door at 323 King George Terrace, was attempting to thaw his water line which extends under Duffield's house.

The spokesman said Judson apparently got too close to the house and the torch ignited the tinder-dry cedar shingle siding shortly before 5 p.m.

Judson escorted Mrs. Duffield to safety and turned in the alarm after flames rapidly spread up the siding and broke into the house at a number of points.

It took firemen nearly two hours to extinguish the blaze.

The spokesman said Mrs. Duffield will stay with her son until repairs are completed.

RCV proposal put on hold for one week

A Racquet Club of Victoria Holdings Ltd. request for more time to consider Saanich's offer to purchase the club has been tabled by council.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said today council won't take any action for at least a week.

In the meantime it expects word from the province concerning its application for funds to help acquire the club, Couvelier said.

Saanich should be able to get at least $400,000 from the provincial government under the Recreational Facilities Assistance Program, Ald. Howard Sturrock said in a confidential report released Monday.

Sturrock chaired a special committee investigating the possiblity of acquiring the facility as a public recreation centre.

Couvelier said that by Monday the holding company should be in a better position to discuss its position.

The holding company executive has three proposals to examine and will make a decision on the financially-troubled operation's future after a Feb. 5 meeting.

Saanich's purchase offer expired Jan. 23, but holding company president Don Francis wrote council asking that the deadline be extended to Feb. 29.

Leaseholder Racquet Club of Victoria Society, representing the members, said it doesn't want Saanich to purchase the facility and is trying to raise enough money from members to save it.

In his report, Sturrock says total costs of acquiring the facility after picking up the mortgage debt and doing minor renovations will be $978,000.

Assuming the municipality receives $400,000 from the government, its will end up paying $587,000 for the club.

Book value of fixed assets at cost is $1.8 million and replacement cost of the assests is estimated at $4 million, the report states.

Operating deficit for 1980 will be $142,000, according to a municipal staff estimate.

If it acquires the facility the municipality will also lose $36,000 worth of taxes paid by the racquet club.

School trustees pull out of GVLRA - 'Not worth it'

Greater Victoria school trustees voted unanimously Monday to pull out of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association, the municipal employers' group which bargains with employees of capital region municipalities and the school board.

Chairman Carol Pickup said the board isn't getting its money's worth out of the $30,000 annual membership dues.

She also cited a prevailing anti-union attitude at the GVLRA and among the other members of the association.

The Victoria school district was the odd man out as the only school board in the GVLRA, whose other members include the four core municipalities, the regional district, and the three Saanich Peninsula municipalities, she said.

"The board is quite a different body."

Sooke and Saanich school districts are not members.

Pickup said the Victoria school board administrative staff found themselves spending more time on labor relations matters than before the board joined in 1976.

"Our staff seems to be spending more time than before following up on grievances and other people's mistakes."

She also said "there has been a marked alienation from our CUPE employees since we joined." Trustees and board staff had felt the GVLRA was "remote and impersonal," she added.

The city school board's pullout will not take effect until three months' written notice has been delivered to the GVLRA and the provincial Labor Relations Board has given its approval.

GVLRA chief Carl Anshelm had no comment on the move, but CUPE officials were happy.

"It's the best thing they've done in a long time," said Helen Bell, president of local 947 of CUPE which represents about 320 clerical staff at the school board.

"I would be very pleased. I think the whole union would be too. With the GVLRA it's rather a useless situation as far as clerical workers are concerned. I would hope bargaining with the board would be much pleasanter."

Muriel Overgard, regional vice-president of CUPE for B.C. and a member of local 947's executive, said relations with the school board "can't do anything else but improve" now that it is withdrawing.

She confirmed Pickup's comment that CUPE members had become aliented from their employer.

CP Air backed

B.C. Transportation Minister Alex Fraser said Monday he has written to the Canadian Transport Commission to express his support for CP Air's application to provide scheduled service to Victoria.

CP Air service to Victoria would help to ease the problems of travel between Victoria and other points by providing increased service at peak travel times.

Refund pledge if Soviet trip off

Alberta and B.C. students signing up for a tour of Russia will receive full refunds if the federal government prevents them from making the trip, a tour company spokesman said today.

Norman Clark, Vancouver manager for Media Study Tours of Winnipeg, said the refunds would include $100 deposits in the $1,179 price-tag if Ottawa steps in because of the escalating cold war following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Among about 200 students signed up are 21 from Stelly's secondary school. Saanich school trustees decided Monday night to delay approval of the March trip until Ottawa clarifies its position.

Board members agreed to ask Education Minister Brian Smith to determine if the external affairs department will let the trip go ahead in light of Prime Minister Joe Clark's recent announcement of a boycott on the Olympic Games and cancellation of Russian-Canadian cultural exchanges programs.

Local organizer Chris Harker, a teacher at the school, told the board the students have paid $1,179 each for the trip and the deadline for cancellation without penalty was Jan. 15.

He said he had been advised by Esquimalt-Saanich MP Don Munro on that day that the external affairs department didn't feel there was any risk or danger associated with the trip and the government had no legal reason to prevent it from taking place.

The 10-day tour involving nine schools is scheduled to leave Vancouver March 28 with stop-overs at Helsinki, Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev.

Other B.C. schools participating are Armstrong, Kamloops, Prince George and West Vancouver.

The West Vancouver school board gave its approval earlier this month.

So far less than 10 per cent of the students who signed up have cancelled.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	4 ◇	Pass

Opening lead — king of hearts.

Consider this deal where South got to six spades on the bidding shown. North's four diamond bid (called a splinter bid) was conventional; it showed the values for a jump raise to three spades (forcing) but at the same time specified a singleton diamond (or conceivably a void).

West led the king of hearts, taken in dummy with the ace, and superficially it seemed that declarer would have to guess which way to take the two-way club finesse to make the slam. But South was a thoroughly experienced player and was not inclined to stake the outcome on guessing which defender had the queen of clubs. Accordingly, South embarked on a method of play that assured the slam regardless of where the queen of clubs was located.

After playing the ace of trumps at trick two, he cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond in dummy. This was followed by a low trump to the king and another diamond ruff in dummy. By this time the stage was set for the sure-thing endplay.

Declarer exited with a heart from dummy and it did not matter which defender won the heart lead. The winner of the trick, whether East or West, would have to return either a club (thus trapping the queen of clubs), or else a heart or a diamond (thus allowing South to discard a club as he ruffed the return in dummy).

The elimination play that declarer executed followed the usual pattern. South first eliminated suit number one (spades), then suit number two (diamonds), and next put the enemy on lead with suit number three (hearts) to force the enemy to lead suit number four (clubs). That's how most elimination plays work.

Before the judge

A 20-year-old man who pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Monday to two counts of theft under $200 was placed back in custody and remanded until March 5 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing by Judge Blake Allan.

Donald Lawrence Schneider, no fixed address, was jointly charged with Randolph Evan Evans, also 20, of 2432 Quadra, in connection with a Jan. 21 incident. Both were released on their undertaking to appear.

Crown counsel Richard Law said a witness at 403 John St. saw two men breaking into the premises of Reliable Transfer, 2614 Bridge, and called Victoria police.

Police arrived too late to apprehend the suspects, who took a tool box, but received another call about 15 minutes later concerning two youths matching the description breaking into an Aalter Catering truck parked at 555 Hillside and taking cigarettes and foodstuffs valued at about $100.

The pair were caught by police and Evans showed police where the tool box was hidden. Schneider remained totally silent and unco-operative, Law added.

Schneider had an extensive criminal record which included 10 convictions for theft, five for possession of stolen property, two for breaking and entering and one each for common assault, failing to appear in court and breach of probation between April 23, 1976, and Nov. 1, 1978, all in Ontario. He had received two suspended sentences and jail terms ranging from one day to six months.

Evans, who had no previous convictions, was given a suspended sentence, 12 months probation and 80 hours of community service work.

A 19-year-old who became angry because his car was being towed away was given a suspended sentence and 12 months probation but was also ordered by Allan to make restitution for the damage he caused.

William Richard Corbett, 3026 Cook, pleaded guilty to two counts of mischief causing wilful damage.

Law said Corbett's vehicle was being towed away about 7:30 p.m. Jan. 14 from an apartment parking lot at 129 Gorge Road because it was illegally parked. Corbett became angry after paying the towing bill and kicked the left rear door of another car and a glass panel of a door belonging to the apartment manager who phoned for the tow truck. Damage to the car was placed at $100 and to the window at $50.

Allan remanded Corbett until Feb. 11 for Law to determine whether the restitution in connection with the car should be paid to the Insurance Corporation of B.C. or the vehicle's owner.

A Grade 12 student at Claremont High School was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work after pleading guilty to two counts under the Wildlife Act.

Michelle Francisco Olivotto, 4983 Cordova Bay, pleaded guilty to being a minor carrying a firearm, in this case a long bow, without an accompanying adult and hunting without a valid species licence tag.

Court was told conservation officers were called to Olivotto's residence Oct. 18 where they observed him skinning a buck deer. Olivotto admitted killing the deer, which was swimming at the time, with the bow.

Allan imposed 25 hours of community work on each count.

Judge Harold Alder handed out a jail term to a 29-year-old man who pleaded guilty to driving while under suspension.

Allan Wilfred Knapp, 1030 St. Charles, was given a seven-day sentence after he entered the guilty plea.

Fined $400 for having care and control of a vehicle while impaired was 32-year-old Barry Greg Low, 3285 Brypark.

Chocolate stain gives away theft

The case of the chocolate stain ended in Victoria provincial court Monday with Judge Blake Allan giving a 17-year-old girl a suspended sentence and tongue-lashing.

Wendy Parsons, who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering Lillian West Bakery, 773 Fort, was placed on six months probation, ordered to obey an 11:30 nightly curfew during that time, and told not to associate with another girl who was with her early Jan. 14.

Crown counsel Richard Law told the court Victoria police checked Parsons and her companion at Douglas and Fort about 1:30 a.m. and let them proceed on their way. Law said the officers decided a short time later that they wanted to question them further and broadcast a description of the pair.

As they were questioning the girls a second time, one of the officers noticed a chocolate stain on the front of one of the girls which wasn't there before.

They checked the area and discovered that the bakery had been broken into and a cake, valued at $2, was missing.

The girls then admitted they were hungry and made a spur-of-the-moment decision to break into the bakery.

Heart attack by pilot possible

VANCOUVER (CP) — The pilot of a plane which crashed near Alert Bay last year, killing six persons, had a medical condition that could have led to a heart attack, a coroner's jury was told Monday.

Dr. Jeffery Burton of Vancouver General Hospital said Paul Smith, 51, of Quadra Island, had hardening of the arteries, which could have led to a heart attack in a situation where the heart was speeded up.

Burton said Smith lived long enough to take at least one breath after the Sept. 6 crash because his lungs showed he had breathed in hot gases from the fire.

The pilot's wife, Muriel Smith, testified that her husband had his last medical examination April 25 but was kept awake one night by shortness of breath less than two weeks before the fatal flight.

She said the incident was not reported and she did not notice anything unusual about his health after that.

She told the inquest her husband had said medical examinations required by Transport Canada were a waste because they often did not include basic tests.

John Veevers, a transport investigator, ruled out a mechanical malfunction and weather as significant factors in the crash.

Veevers said wind conditions at the remote crash site at Shoal Harbor on Gilford Island were "a fair up-down draft but nothing too significant."

He also said the single-engine Beaver float plane was apparently "still producing power" as it veered into a treed hillside immediately after taking off from the Weldwood of Canada camp nearby.

In response to questions from Howard Barends, lawyer for Gulf Air Services of Campbell River, operator of the aircraft, Veevers said he was not qualified to comment on the medical condition of Smith.

Asked by Barends if the accident was consistent with the pilot being incapacitated, Veevers replied, "It would certainly seem that way."

Several witnesses described unusual acts by Smith, including the fatal takeoff which was in the opposite direction normally taken from Shoal Harbor. Coroner Joe Carpenter noted that unusual behavior can be one indication of an impending heart attack.

Another witness described a frightening flight from Campbell River to Thurston Bay taken with Smith only two days before the crash.

Anna Molett said instead of landing on the bay at the camp, Smith flew up a small canyon. Halfway through he suddenly made a turn so sharp one wing pointed at the ground and nearly hit a stone bluff, she said.

The jury is investigating the deaths of Smith and passengers Ann Louise Halliday, 22, of Kingcome Inlet; Andy Britsas, 32; E. Batterbury, 21, of Victoria; Garry Mitchell, 32, of Comox, and Marcel LePage, 28, of Port Alberni.

Doctor upheld in patient's hospital death

VANCOUVER (CP) — A doctor's conduct in the death of a patient at Vancouver General Hospital was upheld Monday by the College of Physicians and Surgeons of British Columbia.

The 11-member college council judged Dr. Kenneth Roy MacKenzie's professional competence to be of "high quality and beyond reproach."

A coroner's jury investigating the death of Robert Wilfred Landry, 34, recommended in November the college review the emergency physician's performance in the case.

Landry, a Langley pipefitter, died of a stroke Sept. 17 in the psychiatric ward after doctors diagnosed his condition as a personality disorder.

The five-member jury found that MacKenzie "assessed and treated Landry in a careless fashion" and that he "failed to conduct an adequate examination and did not keep adequate records of the examination that he did perform."

However, the college council, acting on a report by a two-member inquiry committee, ruled no action was necessary against MacKenzie.

The council found MacKenzie's emergency department records of Landry were brief but ruled it was an isolated incident and not a reflection of the physician's usual high standard of record-keeping.

"The committee noted the extreme difficulty presented by this patient in that he was unco-operative both physically and mentally."

The case began Sept. 16 when police picked Landry up on a city street, apparently drunk.

The arresting officer, himself on medication to prevent a stroke, correctly diagnosed Landry's symptoms and sent him to hospital.

Landry was examined by a hospital doctor and sent to the city drunk tank.

A jail doctor examined Landry and concluded he had a serious neurological disorder.

Landry was taken briefly to St. Paul's Hospital but was sent back to VGH where he came under the care of MacKenzie.

Reward posted for Calgary child's murderer

CALGARY (CP) — The Calgary Herald has offered a $5,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Kimberly Thompson, publisher Frank G. Swanson announced Monday.

The nude body of five-year-old Kimberly was found Friday stuffed in a garbage bag in an alley just three blocks from her southwest Calgary home.

Her mother Evelyn Thompson reported her missing Thursday after she failed to come home from kindergarten for lunch. School officials say she apparently didn't make it to class that morning.

Swanson said the reward is being offered on behalf of the people of Calgary "who are united in their determination to resolve this tragic matter."

Meanwhile, police are combing the neighborhood where the girl's body was found to try to come up with a lead to the killing.

About 30 policemen, aided by city sanitation department crews, spent the weekend carefully checking truckloads of garbage collected from within 10 blocks of the place she was found.

"I wish we had something, but we don't," said S.Sgt. Roy Evans, chief of homicide.

The cause, time and location of Kimberly's death is still a mystery.

An autopsy was conducted Saturday but the medical examiner was unable to determine a cause of death, police said. There were no "obvious wounds or fractures to her body."

More tests are being conducted by the RCMP crime laboratory in Edmonton but results are not expected until later this week.

Because Kimberly's body was found nude, police believe the murder was sexually motivated.

Some residents believe the murder is the work of a man believed responsible for 20 indecent assaults on young girls in southwest Calgary in the last four years. However Evans said it is "doubtful" the two are connected.

"That theory is not to be over-looked, but it's doubtful."

Expelled Soviets depart

MONTREAL (CP) — Three Soviet diplomats departed for Moscow on Monday after being expelled from Canada for espionage activities involving the purchase of classified information from a U.S. citizen.

Security at Montreal's Mirabel International Airport was tight as the three diplomats, two of whom were clad in fur hats and leather coats, boarded a regular Aeroflot flight.

Their expulsion was announced a week ago by External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald who described the incident as "the most serious case of espionage" in Canada in more than 30 years.

The diplomats who left the country Monday were: Capt. Igor Bardeev, military, naval and air attache; Col. Eduard Aleksanjan, assistant military attache; and V.I. Sokolov, a chauffeur for the military attache's office.

The grim-faced trio rushed by reporters without making any comment and boarded a passenger-transportation vehicle which took them to the plane ahead of other passengers. As they boarded the vehicle, the diplomats broke into smiles.

The Russians arrived at the airport more than an hour before departure and waited outside in their car with their RCMP escort.

Miss MacDonald said the RCMP had determined that over a period of 16 months, the Soviet officials had met clandestinely with the U.S. citizen in Ottawa, buying information from him.

Officials in Canada and the U.S. won't say what kind of information the American was passing to the diplomats, although the military background of the envoys would indicate it was probably defence data.

Miss MacDonald said the U.S. citizen was not in military service and was not a civil servant although he was "in the kind of establishment that would have been used by government."

FP shares sale given green light

WINNIPEG (CP) — An attempt to block the sale of a large chunk of non-voting equity shares in FP Publications Ltd. to Thomson Newspapers Ltd. was rejected Monday by the Manitoba Court of Appeal.

The five-justice court ruled unanimously that the interests of 15-year-old Victor Sifton were not harmed by a decision of trustees of the late John Sifton to sell the shares to Thomson.

June Sifton, mother of Victor and wife of John, asked the court to invalidate the sale and give individual family members control of shares.

The court said there was no evidence the trustees were acting against Victor's interests. Justice John O'Sullivan said the youth will earn $12 million to $15 million after taxes from the sale to Thomson of his 634,500 class B shares in FP.

The court decision means Thomson now owns 79 per cent of the more valuable equity shares and 54 per cent of the class A or voting shares.

No conspiracy Giguere says

MONTREAL (CP) — Senator Louis Giguere says he never took any action to favor the extension by the federal government of a lease for Sky Shops Export Ltd. on a duty-free shop at Montreal's Dorval airport.

Giguere, 68, testified Monday that at no time did he conspire with Clarence Campbell, former president of the National Hockey League, and Gordon Brown, a Bahamas-based businessman, to use his influence to obtain the extension.

Campbell and Brown, who were major shareholders in Sky Shops, are accused of having conspired with others to give Giguere a $95,000 benefit in return for the use of his influence.

When Giguere was asked by defence lawyer Harvey Yarosky if he had been accused of the same conspiracy charges, he replied that he had been acquitted.

Giguere said his purchase of 5,000 shares in Sky Shops in 1972 at $1 a share — a few months before he sold them at a profit of $95,000 when the company was taken over — was the result of his exercising an option to make the purchase given him by the late Louis Lapointe in 1968.

The trial continues.

1,496 fighting election battle

Canadian Press

Official candidates lists filed Monday will read like casualty lists after the federal election Feb. 18.

Only 282 of the record 1,496 candidates registered with chief electoral officer Jean-Marc Hamel will emerge from the campaign battle to take their seats in the House of Commons.

Of course, there will be recounts of narrow decisions; illness, death or other misfortunes will allow a runner-up to go to Ottawa.

But with an average of more than five candidates in each riding, there will be more than 1,200 losers licking their wounds after the national vote.

For many, it will be a defeat of the spirit — loss of time, hope, effort and campaign funds. For those unfortunates who fail to garner at least 15 per cent of the ballots, it will mean the loss of those things, plus their $200 deposit.

There were 82 more candidates registered for the upcoming election than for the one last May 22.

The Progressive Conservatives and the Liberals have candidates in all ridings. The NDP is represented in all but the Quebec riding of Berthier-Maskinonge where Robert de Cotret, economic development minister, is trying to overcome a 9,700-vote Liberal majority.

The Social Credit party, which had to fight to keep its status as an official party, has 80 candidates. Fifty-six are in Quebec, down from 74 in May. The party took six seats in Quebec last year, but Richard Janelle crossed the floor to the Conservative benches and will run for that party in Lotbiniere.

Quebec had 518 registrations in 75 ridings, meaning Quebecers account for more than one-third of all hopefuls across the country. Fringe parties — Independents, Communists, Marxist-Leninists, Libertarians and the jocular Rhinoceros party — accounted for almost half the candidates.

In Ontario, 477 candidates are contesting 95 seats. The three major parties are represented in all ridings.

With the Liberals dominant in Quebec and the Conservatives in the Prairies, it is generally acknowledged that the next Parliament will be decided in Metropolitan Toronto's 23 ridings and in at least 34 of the string of constituencies stretching from Windsor to Oshawa.

The emergence of fringe parties — 192 candidates — is nowhere more evident than in Toronto Spadina where a total of 11 candidates are running, including two Rhinos. The riding has the most candidates in Canada.

None of the 571 non-major-party candidates is given a good chance of winning.

The Rhinos — whose description of the ideal member of parliament includes the attributes of being short-sighted and thick-skinned — gave a humorous perspective to the usually white-knuckled approach of traditional politicians.

The party fielded Al Jukebox Simmons in Winnipeg-St. James, Honest Don Bergen in Winnipeg-Birds Hill and Jean Chat Botte (loosely translated, Puss in Boots) Bonnier in Montreal Laval.

Only the Yukon had no fringe candidates. Former territorial commissioner Ione Christensen is running as a Liberal against Public Works Minister Erik Nielsen and an NDP candidate.

Art Phillips will have to fend off seven rivals for Vancouver Centre, the riding he won by only 85 votes in a recount last May. The Socreds, once a formidable force in federal politics in British Columbia, have only five candidates.

At dissolution, standing in the Commons was: PC 136, Liberal 114, NDP 27 and Social Credit 5.

Sabre-rattling split in NDP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ed Broadbent is not reflecting the views of New Democrat members — or his own party caucus — when he backs President Jimmy Carter's pledge for the United States to heat up the cold war with the Soviet Union, says Pauline Jewett.

"No one would go along with that," Ms. Jewett told a questioner Sunday at a United Nations Association-sponsored discussion on disarmament.

If Broadbent, NDP national leader, is backing Carter's stand, "then he is not speaking for me, the caucus or the party," said the NDP MP for New Westminster-Coquitlam in the last House.

Ms. Jewett said she doubts that Broadbent would throw his weight behind Carter's threats to use military force if necessary to repel attempts by the Soviets to expand into the Persian Gulf region.

"That is not true and I do not believe that that is what Ed meant in that statement," she said.

Broadbent said Friday that the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan is "a new sense of aggression on the part of the Soviet Union."

"The general thrust and determination of President Carter in letting the Soviet Union know that if it wants to heat up the cold war, (then) western democracies are ready to face that, I support that 100 per cent," said Broadbent.

Ms. Jewett contradicted her leader, saying that Canada should deal with the Soviets by using "economic and trade sanctions, and through political and democratic means."

"We (the NDP) do not support military action or sabre rattling," she added. "Our emphasis is, and must continue to be, disarmament because it is madness to have any other emphasis."

The questioner identified himself as a member of the Richmond-South Delta NDP constituency association and said that constituency associations in the Vancouver area are angry with Broadbent's backing of Carter.

The discussion was held to give candidates in the Feb. 18 federal general election a chance to outline party defence policies.

Juvenile home accord signed

The provincial corrections branch has signed an agreement involving the Family Court Committee in the operation of the Juvenile Detention Centre at 1125 Pembroke, committee chairman Victoria Ald. Gretchen Brewin said today.

Now it's up to the four core municipalities to approve the sale of the facility to B.C. Buildings Corporation, she said.

Oak Bay and Esquimalt have approved and Brewin said she expects Saanich and Victoria to do so by next week.

The document gives the committee power to review cases and decide if any inmates can stay longer than the 30-day maximum it imposed several months ago.

Overcrowding is one of the committee's major concerns, Brewin said.

Meanwhile, BCBC property manager Gil Gilmore said work has begun on an expensive security system in anticipation of the sale going through soon.

Doors, some windows and the entire locking system will have to be replaced at a cost of $200,000.

Inmates have inflicted serious damage since the centre reopened in October and five juveniles broke out of the facility several weeks ago.

New hardware needed by the centre included 30 new doors, 12 steel window frames, 20 Lexan plastic plate windows, 26 electronic cell locks and 40 security deadbolts.

Poor wording muffs motion

An awkwardly-worded motion was stillborn at Esquimalt council Monday, but its sponsor promised to inject some life into it at the next meeting.

Ald. Colin Blair was trying to have parks and recreation manager Jack Boutilier called before council for failing to comply with two council policies when he recommended that a contract for a $25,000 sprinkling system for Bullen Park be given to a Burnaby firm.

But even Ald. Larry Mann, who had also argued against awarding the contract, said he couldn't recognize Blair's statement as a proper motion.

It read: "Re failure of the parks and recreation manager to comply with council's policy to giving preference to local businesses for the purchase of goods and services for the municipality."

No one would second the motion.

Mayor Ken Hill wouldn't allow Blair to reword the motion immediately as municipal clerk George Merz had asked Blair if the motion was exactly as Blair wanted it and Blair said it was.

Under new business, however, the mayor accepted a notice of motion from Blair to the effect that Boutilier be called before council to justify his actions in the sprinkler system purchase.

Council awarded the contract for the system to a Burnaby firm Jan. 15.

Mann and Blair argued that because the contract was more than $3,000, it should have gone to tender. It is also council policy that when bid prices are comparable, the work should go to a local firms.

Boutilier had asked for quick action on the matter to meet the deadline for the Neighborhood Improvement Program, which is funded by senior governments.

In other business, council accepted a recommendation to instruct its solicitor to oppose any application to the B.C. Supreme Court that would change the land-use contract between Esquimalt and Paxxon Marketing Corp., which owns a townhouse complex on Sea Terrace straddling the Esquimalt-Victoria boundary.

Torchy rode straight to greatness

Determination to become a contestant at the Olympic Games carried William (Torchy) Peden to a pinnacle beyond his dream of competing in the 1928 Games at Amsterdam.

It carried the big Canadian redhead, who died at the age of 73 from cancer Saturday at Northbrook, Ill., to a world professional bicycle-racing championship.

Born in Victoria, the second-oldest of six children, Peden was a strong performer in several sports, including rugby, basketball and swimming, when he set his sights on earning a place on Canada's Olympic squad.

The next thing was to select a sport and although he had won a silver medal in breaststroke at the Canadian swimming championships, Torchy listened to his mother's advice and concentrated on cycling.

Reaping benefits from a demanding training schedule while working as a mechanic in a logging camp, the six-foot-three, 220-pound Peden won numerous races during 1926 and 1927. Many of the victories were in road events, but some were scored on cinder tracks at Victoria's Royal Athletic Park and Vancouver's Brockton Park.

He acquired his nickname from one of the road races in Vancouver, after a newspaper reporter wrote: "Big Bill Peden, his red hair showing the way like a torch, outsprinted his rivals to the finishing line."

Although he still had much to learn about racing tactics when he arrived in Toronto for the 1928 Olympic trials, Torchy earned places on Canada's pusuit team and road-racing team. Medals eluded him at Amsterdam and his performance in the 102-mile Olympic road race, in which two tire punctures and a touch of food poisoning, apparently caused by taking nourishment from a new aluminum flask, doomed him to a 27th-place finish, was one of his biggest disappointments.

He said later he was too ashamed to return home and he remained in Europe for a series of road races. It turned into a triumphant tour with victories in major races in Poland, France, England and Scotland, including record-setting efforts in Warsaw and Glasgow.

He finally returned home to a civic reception in Victoria and in 1929 again headed for Eastern Canada, where he swept all the titles in the national amateur championships. Following that success he turned professional for sprint races in Detroit and rode his first six-day race in the fall of 1929 at Montreal, where he finished second with Bill Coles.

Within a few years his determination, legendary stamina and good sprinting speed had made Peden the greatest rider on the six-day circuit. His flair for showmanship also helped him become one of the highest-paid athletes. In a sport that included summer racing outdoors on eastern U.S. board tracks, top riders could earn $20,000 to $40,000 in a year.

The six-day events — continuous relay races between two-man teams — were staged on steeply-banked board tracks built in arenas, like Madison Square Garden and Montreal Forum. Tactics, sprinting speed and endurance were all required for success as teams covered 2,500 miles or more in the six days, sometimes reaching speeds of close to 50 mile per hour and sometimes riding at a slow pace during morning hours when fans had left the buildings.

From his first triumph in 1931 until his final race at Chicago in 1948, Torchy competed in 148 of gruelling grinds to nowhere, finishing all but three, winning 38 and finishing second 24 times. After he had broken the world record for career victories set by Dutch star Piet van Kempen, the husky redhead was joined in 1936 by his brother Doug, now Sports Editor of the Times, and the combination added six more wins to the record, which reached 38 with a triumph at Montreal in 1941 and which lasted until 1965.

Always a believer that professional cycling could make a comeback in North America with proper promotion and some rule changes, Torchy was also interested in amateur athletes. He coached the Canadian cycling team at the 1932 Los Angeles Olympics, was an assistant track coach at the 1936 Berlin Games and was a technical aid for cycling at the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

His most recent contribution was directing the U.S. national cycling championships at the Northbrook track last summer.

"I had an ambition to run the nationals," he said a few months ago. "I've had that now."

A U.S. citizen and a Northbrook resident since 1953, Peden is survived by his wife, Annamae, one son, William Jr., and three daughters, Debbie, Alice-Ann and Carol. Funeral services will be held Wednesday evening in Northbrook.

TORCHY PEDEN . . . dream became reality

LYNN PATRICK . . . started with crash course

A great gap in Victoria's sport history

A large slice of Victoria's living sports history died on the weekend with the passing of the former hockey great the fans once derisively nicknamed Sonja Henie.

That was back in the autumn of 1934 when the Rangers fans in New York ridiculed Lynn Patrick's fluid skating style. But the 22-year-old, then a rookie in the National Hockey League, went on to show them a thing or two, and perhaps enjoy the last laugh.

At first, though, he had a problem getting accepted because he had very little in the way of a hockey background — just a little casual play in Victoria, then a crash two-year training program in Montreal. The New Yorkers just couldn't believe he was good enough to be a big leaguer. It turned out that he was.

That first season, he put up with the nickname and scored 13 goals. And in his 10 years as a Ranger, he twice led the club in scoring, was named to both the NHL First and Second Team All-Stars, and was the superb playmaker in the Bryan Hextall-Phil Watson line that became one of the best in hockey.

Brother Muzz Patrick joined Lynn four years after his arrival along with Babe Pratt, Mac and Neil Colville, Alex Shibicky and Phil Watson and the rest of those classy players who took the Stanley Cup to New York in 1940.

After 10 years with the Rangers and a couple of war years in the U.S. Army, Lynn coached New York for a season and took them to the playoff finals.

In 1950, he got a call from Boston general manager Art Ross to coach the Bruins and thus began 15 frustrating years as coach and general manager in Boston. He was ousted in 1965 after five straight last-place finishes, leaving a year too soon to hail the arrival of a rookie named Bobby Orr, who was to turn things around for Boston.

A year later, Lynn Patrick was asked to head the new expansion franchise of St. Louis Blues. He signed Scotty Bowman as coach and the Blues shocked the hockey world by going to the Stanley Cup finals in each of their first three seasons.

Lynn suffered a heart attack Saturday while in his car a few blocks from the St. Louis Checkerdome, where he had watched the Blues play to a 4-4 tie with Colorado. He was driving back to his converted farmhouse home, 13 miles away on wooded acreage in the St. Louis suburb of De Peres, just as he had been on that afternoon of April 1, 1972, after preparing the arena for that night's playoff game against Chicago. He had made it home that time, to find his wife of 27 years, the former Bernice Lang of Detroit, unconscious on the floor of the bedroom stricken by a cerebral hemorrage. She died a week later.

At that date in 1972, Lynn Patrick was a St. Louis Blues vice-president, still five years away from winding up his more than four decades in the NHL as player, coach, general manager and senior executive.

His passing leaves very few sportsmen of that classic stamp remaining.

And with Lynn's death, and the passing of old boyhood friend Torchy Peden in suburban Chicago — in a matter of hours — Victoria has been greatly saddened by the loss of two members of its greatest sports families.

Lynn's funeral will take place Wednesday in St. Louis.

No sacred cows, so Punch sets out to beef up Leafs

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard, disturbed by Toronto Maple Leafs' recent performances, has dispatched general manager Punch Imlach to National Hockey League meetings in Florida this week with the edict to trade for a winner.

The Leafs concluded a seven-game road trip in Vancouver with a 5-2 win Sunday night over the slumping Canucks, but the result did little to salve Ballard's embarassment of an 8-3 loss at Edmonton the previous night.

"We can't sit still any longer and I've told Punch to get some new faces on this team," Ballard said as the club returned home from its extended road trip which saw it win two and lose five games. "I'm certain we'll have some new deals to announce in the next couple of weeks.

"I've been trying to win the Stanley Cup the last 10 years, the last few years with the same players. Well, we seem to be getting farther away from it, not closer, so we just have to make changes.

"Imlach is one of the best wheeler-dealers in the game and when he's in Florida with all the other general managers you can bet he'll be making some deals."

And Ballard was emphatic that there were no sacred cows on the team.

Asked if former captain Darryl Sittler was a candidate to go elsewhere, just as his good buddy Lanny McDonald did a few weeks ago in the first of several anticipated major moves by Imlach, Ballard said: "If we can make deals that will improve our team, then we have no sacred cows, not a single one."

Sittler, who collected three assists in the Vancouver game in what some observers felt was his strongest effort in several weeks, admits he's concerned about trade talks.

"I wouldn't really like to get out," the veteran centre said. "I signed a long-term contract with the team that has five years to go. I signed it with the intention of staying in Toronto . . . I'm willing to live up to my half of the deal if management wants to live up to their half."

Sittler, who gave up the captaincy to protest McDonald's trade to Colorado Rockies, said the team is putting too much emphasis on individual performance which has resulted in a breakdown in communications on the ice.

"Lately, the forwards have been blaming the defencemen, the defencemen have been blaming the forwards and everyone has been blaiming the goaltenders. We just have to forget all that and start to play as a team."

Imlach has already said he's prepared to entertain offers from any team prepared to absolve Leafs of Sittler's no-cut clause and his hefty salary. Sittler's agent, Alan Eagleson, said the price tag for deleting the clause could range as high as $1 million.

Eagleson also said Sittler's choice of clubs to which he would accept a trade was also selective — Montreal Canadiens, Buffalo Sabres, Philadelphia Flyers, Minnesota North Stars or Chicago Blackhawks.

Imlach is known to be in the market for a goaltender since Mike Palmateer, the incumbent No. 1 on the club, has been involved in a prolonged contract hassle with Imlach and hasn't played much in recent weeks because of an ankle injury.

Palmateer, who was originally injured Dec. 26, played only eight minutes in Los Angeles last Thursday before re-injurying the ankle. Doctors have ordered Palmateer to rest for 10 days.

Backup Paul Harrison and Vincent Tremblay have surrendered 105 goals in the 20 games that Palmateer has missed.

Tonight in sports

High school basketball fans will have the most difficult choice of what to see tonight.

In the Greater Victoria High School Girls' League, Spectrum is at Esquimalt at 4 while, at 6:30, Victoria visits Dunsmuir, Belmont is at Oak Bay and Stelly's pays a call on Mt. Douglas.

Belmont visits Oak Bay and Parkland is at Spectrum in Greater Victoria High School Boys' League games at 8.

If hockey is your game, Saanich Braves face Juan de Fuca Gulls in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" League game at 7:30 in Pearkes Arena.

There is a possibility, too, that there will be a third and deciding game in the best-of-three British Columbia senior men's curling championship at 7 in Esquimalt Sports Centre. The second game was scheduled this afternoon.

Stay-at-homes can take in coverage of the Avon Classic women's professional tennis tournament at 7 on Channel 7.

If it's Shack, then clear the track

Toronto Maple Leafs' Oldtimers, with a lineup that may include such familiar names as Johnny Bower and Eddie (Clear the Track) Shack, are tentatively scheduled to visit Victoria.

The Canadian Oldtimers Hockey Association, arranging the exhibition with Victoria RC Kinks, is expected to finalize arrangements this week for the Memorial Arena game on March 14.

Latest results haven't changed things around at all for either the University of Victoria Vikings or the Vikettes. This week's national university basketball rankings show the Vikings are still in third place behind Winnipeg and Brandon and the Vikettes remain No.1 in the country ahead of Bishop's and Dalhousie.

Harper rink takes opener

Glen Harper of Duncan, the Pacific Coast Curling Association champion, edged Jake Block of Smithers 6-5 Monday in the opening game of the best-of-three British Columbia senior men's curling championship at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The second game was scheduled this afternoon and a third, if necessary, will be played at 7 tonight with the winner advancing to the Canadian final March 9-14 at St. John, N.B.

Harper and his rink of Ralph Fulford, Howie Valleau and Bob Wilkinson, were two down after five ends against Block, the B.C. Curling Association representative.

But the Duncan shotmaker, who represented B.C. at the Brier in 1963 and the 1966 and 1970 mixed championships, came through with a fine takeout to cut Block out of three on the sixth. This, combined with three costly misses by Block, turned the game around.

Block missed open takeouts with both shots on the seventh end to give Harper a 4-3 lead and the margin increased to three when Block wicked off a counter in the 12-foot with his last shot in the eighth, leaving the Duncan rink with two.

Meanwhile, at Qualicum Beach, Rick Louis of Duncan and Fred Torbohm of Parksville have qualified for the "A" final of the Vancouver Island police playdowns.

Louis advanced with a 7-6 decision over Gerry Miller of Victoria and Torbohm bounced another Victorian, 10-4, in the other semi-final.

Kuhn snubbed by angry Aaron

NEW YORK (AP) — An angry Hank Aaron snubbed Bowie Kuhn, refusing to accept an award from the commissioner Monday in recognition of his 715th home run and charging that baseball's treatment of retired black players continues to leave much to be desired.

Aaron, the all-time major league home run king with 755, was scheduled to be honored by Baseball Magazine for the greatest moment-of-the-decade of the '70s. Kuhn was to make the presentation.

At the same time, Pete Rose of Philadelphia Phillies was honored as player of the decade and Don Baylor of California Angels and Keith Hernandez of St. Louis Cardinals were recognized as the outstanding performers of 1979.

Rose, Baylor and Hernandez appeared at the function but Aaron stayed away, sending a telegram which was read by his agent, Bob Flamm.

It said in part: "Because of the inadequacies in the ballot selection, retirement for black players from baseball, and with the commissioner of baseball I feel I cannot support this activity.

"I understand that Mr. Kuhn requested that he present me the award for the outstanding moment of the 1970s, in honor and recognition of the new all-time home run record set on the eighth of April, 1974. However, looking back, I remember the commissioner did not see the need to attend."

Reached later at the office of the Atlanta Braves, Aaron explained his telegram.

"With the balloting among the writers as far as player of the decade . . . I think the things I achieved overshadowed anything anyone else did in that period," he said.

Aaron said he continues to be bothered by the shortage of retired black players in front office and managerial or coaching jobs in baseball.

"Baseball should live up to its responsibilities," he said.

Aaron said he felt slighted when Kuhn was not on hand in Atlanta for home run No. 715 which broke Babe Ruth's all-time record.

"I have no animosity toward him," the retired slugger said. "But I just think it would have compounded the situation to stand up and accept an award from him for the greatest moment in baseball and he wasn't even there. It was a slap at me when he didn't show up."

Kuhn appeared shocked and surprised when Flamm read the telegram from Aaron.

"I will continue to admire Henry's achievements as among the greatest in the history of baseball and I have no comment beyond that," Kuhn said.

The commissioner was in Cincinnati when Aaron tied Ruth's record of 714 home runs on April 4, 1974. When the Braves returned to Atlanta, the commissioner dispatched Hall of Famer Monte Irvin, a member of his staff, to represent him.

When Aaron hit No. 715, Kuhn was addressing the Cleveland Sports Fans Club, fulfilling a long-standing obligation. Aaron expressed irritation with Kuhn's absence at the time but later accepted an award from the commissioner, commemorating the homer as baseball's Most Memorable Moment.

"That has nothing to do with today," Aaron said.

"I've talked to Henry at various functions and I've never heard any of that from Henry," the commissioner said after listening to the telegram. "Quite the contrary."

Off-color Flames get proper dues

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Al MacNeil didn't need any time to gather his thoughts when asked to analyse Atlanta Flames' 6-1 loss Monday night to Hartford Whalers.

"We played a lousy game and we got what deserved," the Atlanta coach said after the Whalers snapped the Flames' four-game National Hockey League road winning streak.

"We didn't execute and we gave them too many openings and paid a price for it," he added.

The Whalers, sparked by Blaine Stoughton's second three-goal effort of the year and supported by steady netminding from veteran Al Smith, broke a two-game losing streak of their own.

Two goals in the first period — both on long drives — were all the Whalers needed. Both goals were set up by defenceman Al Sims, who wound up with four assists.

The victory was the second in as many games for Hartford against the Flames.

"Atlanta is a big team with big guys," Sims said. "Our game is to skate well and we have a mobile defence. We beat their wingers to the puck tonight and that set up a lot of breakaway chances."

"We had very good production tonight," said Hartford coach Don Blackburn. "Smith played well and our over-all play on defence were big pluses tonight."

The victory moved the Whalers into a tie with Edmonton Oilers and Vancouver Canucks for the 16th place over-all and the final playoff spot, each with 38 points.

Barring leaky roof, Walton back tonight

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego centre Bill Walton is expected to see his first action of the 1979-80 National Basketball Association season tonight when the Clippers entertain Phoenix Suns.

"Unless the game's postponed because of rain I'll play," Walton said Monday. "That happened once in an exhibition game. The roof leaked."

Coach Gene Shue relished the thought of having the injury-plagued centre in the lineup. Walton hasn't played since Feb. 28, 1978 — 30 days short of two years ago. He missed 160 consecutive contests after fracturing and then re-fracturing the navicular bone in his left foot.

San Diego, riding a six-game losing streak and a 27-29 won-lost record for the season, are hoping their $1 million-a-year centre can turn things around.

In Monday's only games, the New York Knicks edged Golden State Warriors 107-103 while Utah Jazz beat the Philadelphia 76ers 107-101.

Airport plan supported

A federal study of local airport management commissions was endorsed by Oak Bay council Monday after hearing details of a $4.8-million improvement program scheduled for 1982 at Patricia Bay airport.

Airport manager Jim Mills told aldermen the money would be spent on raising terminal facilities to 42,000 square feet from the current 24,000 by putting mechanized baggage handling indoors, enlarging the ticketing-waiting area, and improving the arrivals area including a dual purpose customs-immigration section.

The latter would allow the segregated area to be used for domestic arrivals when not being used for international flights.

Enlargement of the aircraft apron would cost $1.2 million, additional automobile parking $800,000, and improvements to the terminal $2.8 million.

Mills was asked if the plans include improvement of electronic equipment, suggesting the control radar is "extraordinarily outdated." Would there be any effort to augment safety in concert with beautification of the terminal, he asked.

"I guess the radar is outdated, because we don't have any," Mills replied.

But he said airport height and ceiling restrictions for poor weather flying make control radar useless anyway.

In heavy fog, even Vancouver (which has radar) closes down and redirects traffic to Abbotsford airport, Mills said.

Aldermen were told the Victoria airport brings in $850,000 a year in revenue and costs about $1.1 million to operate. But Mills said Pat Bay does not get a share of the ticket tax or other small benefits that accrue directly to Ottawa.

Ald. Neil Swainson observed a reverse parallel in the move toward local airport authorities with the centralization 45 years ago of harbor control in the National Harbors Board. He said he agreed with the concept of user fees which would maintain a local airport commission.

Bunn turned to Swainson and asked if customs would be a user-pay service?

"Do you envisage plunking your baggage down and paying a guy two bucks to rummage through it?" It may not be as ludicrous as it sounds, he said.

The new airport would allow direct charter flights to and from Hawaii, but because of international sewage disposal requirements, which Pat Bay could not meet, other overseas flights would not be likely.

Slippers are out

You don't wear slippers to Uplands Park, Oak Bay Ald. Isabel Craig noted Monday.

Council was discussing a recent complaint that in wet weather park strollers have to negotiate some lake-size puddles on the natural paths that wind through the brush at Cattle Point.

Parks committee rejected the idea of gravelling the potholes, or of tampering with nature at all.

"If you go to a dance floor you don't wear hobnailed boots, and if you go to Uplands Park you don't wear dancing slippers," Craig said.

"If you accept the credits — the natural beauty — you must accept the debits."

Bunn slams hospital lists

Oak Bay's delegate to Royal Jubilee Hospital board Monday described the lack of acute care beds "a devastating situation, putting it mildly," and urged the mayor to work on it.

"It is horrendous that some patients, with diagnosed tumors, are waiting weeks to get into hospital," said Ald. Peter Bunn.

He told council it is a "terrible situation" that 150 beds are blocked by long-term care patients and plans for expansion at Oak Bay Lodge long-term care facility are congealed.

"I find things are not going very fast. Nothing terribly concrete has taken place" in the last few weeks, he said.

Construction starting in July would not be completed until 1981, which Bunn finds depressingly slow.

"If this is the way it has to be, it has to be," he said. But with Oak Bay's success in having the lodge zoning altered quickly, he felt the municipality might have some infuence on expansion programming.

He suggested someone "light a fire, if by chance a fire should be lit behind any group or body."

Mayor Doug Watts said he would check further and report to council.

Saving on light holds no glitter

Oak Bay could cut the electricity used by its street lights by 5 per cent, Ald. Neil Swainson said Monday.

By turning the system on 15 minutes later and switching it off 15 minutes earlier, the energy saving could be significant, he said.

He was commenting on a resident's observation that street lights are often on when it is full daylight in the morning and come on before dark in the evening.

Engineer Geoff White said the system is activated by light-sensing photoelectric cells, but it could be adjusted to shorten the lighting period.

But there would be no financial saving involved because Oak Bay pays a fixed rate for electricity used in the street lighting system, he said.

Council referred the energy-saving proposal to its B committee for study.

Prospect Lake to stay rural

Saanich council Monday decisively defeated an application for an industrial rezoning of a small portion of 50 acres of rural Prospect Lake land.

Hobby mechanic Lorne Wright's application was rejected in a 7-1 vote during his second public appearance before council.

During a public hearing several weeks ago council was split 4-4 on the controversial rezoning and Mayor Mel Couvelier suggested postponing a decision until Ald. Geoff Vantreight returned from holidays.

However, a full council Monday bowed to the wishes of area residents and defeated the application to rezone 2.4 acres of the property so Wright could expand car repair activities.

About 130 people attended the meeting and a number of them spoke against the rezoning, saying it would be a violation of the community plan.

Prospect Lake Community Association president Jack Whitehead presented a 225-signature petition opposing the request for an industrial zoning.

Wright bought the property 20 years ago and recently constructed two sheds so he could reconstruct old cars and repair his father's trucks.

Tod Creek channeling planned

Saanich council was told Monday the agriculture ministry is planning a $200,000 drainage scheme for Tod Creek.

A recently completed ministry feasibility study recommends construction of dikes next to the creek to protect farmland from flooding, a pumping station and improvements to the creek channel downstream.

Federal fisheries three years ago instructed Saanich to stop work on the creek until completion of a long-range plan.

The municipality has been carrying out creek clearing operations for several years so flooded farmland could be drained before planting.

The ministry intends to improve the Durrance Road bridge and a roadway crossing upstream of Durrance.

It was true that Patti Hansen, a high-fashion model and aspiring actress, had posed for pictures in Harper's Bazaar and Vogue magazines, said Justice Charles Tierney. And it was equally true, he said, that Hansen had posed nude for the photographer Helmut Newton, whose pictures of her have appeared with her permission in some of his publications. But, the justice ruled in State Supreme Court in Manhattan, a woman who poses for magazines and in the nude does not necessarily become a "public figure." And he issued a preliminary injunction against a magazine called High Society, barring it from further sale of its edition containing pictures of Hansen.

Zielesch

An Ohio couple have even more reason than most to remember their wedding night, because they spent it in jail. The couple, Susan and Larry Stacy of Ravenna, were hauled off in their wedding clothes to the Portage County Jail after they became embroiled in a fistfight with a sheriff's deputy hired to keep the peace at their wedding reception.

Roy Zielesch of Rochester, Minn., may wish he hadn't taken his American Express credit card when he went on vacation in Europe. At least he wishes he hadn't stopped for a drink in the Parisiene Cabaret in Frankfurt. There he signed a bill for each of three drinks he ordered — but didn't realize what he had signed until he was billed by American Express $551.90 for each drink.

Steve Wallenda, great-nephew of the late high-wire artist Karl Wallenda, was arrested after climbing the outside of a 35-storey building under construction in downtown Seattle. Wallenda, 31, said he climbed the building in a publicity stunt to dramatize his view that something has to be done about the Iran hostage crisis. "I was downtown and saw the building. It was very beautiful — high," he said. "I saw something to do so I decided to do it. I get antsy every time I get bored and want something to do." Wallenda said he climbed construction scaffolding and did a handstand when he reached the top. He said his hands became numb from climbing in freezing temperatures and he slipped but caught himself. He did not know the name of the building, but police dubbed it Wallenda Towers.

Dear Abby:

How do I go about telling the girl our son dates to please stop buying our family expensive gifts for every occasion? It embarrasses us to accept them since we can't afford to reciprocate.

She comes from a very large family, and because she gave everyone in our family she ever said hello to a Christmas gift last year, my son felt that he had to do the same for her family. (He is still paying for them.)

For Valentine's Day she gave me a present and also my husband. On Mother's Day, another one, and she's not even engaged to our son. She even found out when our birthdays were (mind and my husband's and the other childrens', even the grandparents!) and the presents come.

I have no objections to her exchanging gifts with my son, but I wish she would leave the rest of his family alone. So, what should I do?

Too Many Gifts

Dear Too Many:

Ask your son to tell the young lady that he appreciates her thoughtfulness and generosity but prefers that she discontinue the gift-giving to the members of his family.

And if that doesn't do the trick, send her thank-you cards for the gifts, and let it go at that. Giving is fine, but it is worth knowing how to give with some consideration of the effects your gifts might have on a person or situation.

Dear Abby:

I'm a rather large woman, 55, neat, well-groomed and far from ugly. I've been married for 35 years to a handsome man who neither drinks nor smokes, but he loves to dance. I love to dance, too, but I have arthritis in both knees, so my dancing days are over.

I have no money worries, live in a nice home, own my own car, so I can come and go as I please. I play bingo about three times a week.

My problem is that my husband goes dancing every Friday and Sunday, while I'm playing bingo. Different friends have told me that I'm a fool to let my husband go dancing without me, but it's no fun to go and sit while he dances with other women. He tells me that all the women he dances with know he's married. He always wears his wedding band and is usually home before I am. I could make things miserable by telling him I would rather he didn't go dancing since I can't dance, but why should I begrudge him the pleasure of doing something I know he enjoys so much?

Abby, I'm so afraid that one day he will come home and tell me he has found someone else. I don't nag him about it, but do you think I'm a fool for letting him go dancing without me?

Worried Wife

Dear Worried:

Yes, as long as you feel threatened. Go with him for a while. It may not be "fun," but it may clear up some of those doubts. It's usually the fear of the unknown that creates uneasiness and worry.

Style knows no handicaps

Velcro patches and raglan sleeves give ease to style-conscious disabled.

By PAT DUFOUR

Fashion often overlooks the handicapped — but it's seldom the other way 'round and many disabled people are frustrated at the lack of suitable styles for their choosing.

A unique clothing service on Vancouver Island, however, operates out of Victoria.

In her spare time, psychiatric nurse Joan Greer is building up the fledgling business of Comfort Designs Ltd., located in basement premises at 10-B Quincy Street.

She is distributor for a non-profit firm called Comfort Clothing Services in Kingston, Ont. The company was formed in 1977 and provides employment for 14 single parents. The company, which was originally funded by a federal government grant, hopes to be employee-owned by the end of this year.

The clothing the company designs and produces is aimed at an often forgotten section of our society, the elderly and the handicapped. Attractive in appearance, the clothes are designed for those who have trouble fastening buttons or who want to look attractive while confined to a bed or wheelchair.

The use of raglan sleeves, large rimmed buttons or velcro grip fasteners, rings on zipper pulls and back slits help bring fashion to those the clothing trade has to a great extent ignored in the past.

Some of the garments in Greer's stock would have even the most modish drooling. There's a long wrap-around skirt that's easily patted into place with velcro grip fasteners. A perfectly charming long apron, complete with two pockets, is easily clipped around the waist. The quilted material would also lend itself to being used as a blanket for a wheelchair patient.

The clothes are so attractive, the easy-on garments would appeal to even those without a disability for their looks and comfort in hot weather.

Looking deceptively like a demure little dress with its white bibbed yoke, is a night-gown that would make any shut-in feel like a fashion plate.

Joan Greer

Other items that make life easier for the handicapped and elderly, such as specially designed bags that can be used by wheelchair patients, are also kept in stock. If a customer needs an extra special item Greer says the Kingston company will design and produce it.

Greer, who works 10 hour shifts as a nurse, spends her days off contacting institutions and other facilities whose patients' lives could be made more exciting by the items she can bring to them.

She first realized how badly such a clothing service is needed in a city wich has more than the normal share of elderly and handicapped when working in the extended care wing of the Glendale Lodge Hospital.

"I know what it is to dress these people; I know the frustration and the time it takes," she says.

The lithesome nurse, who also finds time to pilot the Cessna 140 which she co-owns, says her spare-time job may not be financially that lucrative but in terms of satisfaction it's hard to beat.

"I seem to have a lot of energy and there really is such a need for this new field," she says.

Even with the special care needed to design and produce, the clothes are priced so as to be competitive with those on the racks of conventional clothing stores.

A typical blouse, as an example, sells for $18:95 to $23:95. For another $3 the same blouse is available with grip fasteners.

Operating as a store-at-your-door, a call to Greer at 479-9611 is all that is needed to have a showing.

Greer, who is sure the service is a badly needed one in Victoria, is not so sure that she would leave her nursing career for it. "I don't know, I'm not built to be a salesman...I'll take it as it comes. Maybe, if it gets that big I'll have to get a full-time salesman," she says.

TORONTO (CP) — At 29, Judy Wells heads her own company, distributing health and beauty aids across Canada.

She oversees a staff of more than 50 persons and can point to sales last year in excess of $2.5 million.

Her office-boardroom is invitingly bright, cluttered with fashion magazines, product samples, a silk-flowered plant from her staff and a colorful Saint Laurent scarf drooping off the side of her desk.

Wells looks far from imposing, but appearances are deceiving. The petite, attractive brunette is indeed a businesswoman to be reckoned with, as her competitors would no doubt confirm.

Nine years ago, Wells graduated in general arts from the University of Toronto. Despite her good marks, she accumulated a stack of rejection letters from law schools across the country.

Today she's a self-made millionaire who tripped into the beauty aids business on a fluke.

Through sheer hard work she has garnered 24 product lines of hair care products, soaps and disco glitter spots, all of which she now distributes throughout Canada to drug stores, department stores and beauty salons.

It all started when her father, owner of a beauty supply wholesale business in Toronto, invited her to accompany him to a beauty convention in Chicago. It was a ploy to lure his daughter into the family business.

But Wells had little to do at the convention, and to stave off boredom she began helping a friend to promote a shampoo made by his company.

Her enthusiasm impressed the company so much that Wells, then 23, was offered a job selling its products in the northeastern United States.

She turned down the job, but reconsidered when she was offered the Canadian distribution rights to the products if she stayed with the company for six months.

The idea of starting her own business in the near future was all she needed to convince her to take a stab at life as a travelling saleswoman.

The education she received was invaluable. Wells made good business contacts and learned to work at a roadrunner pace to keep up with the competition.

But she's blunt about the drawbacks she faced as a young woman on the road.

"People think that a life of travel is glamorous but it's actually a very lonely way to live," she says. "I didn't take an apartment. I lived in hotels out of a suitcase and I was in a different city every week."

After 11 months, Wells finally got the promised distribution rights and headed home to $35,000 worth of merchandise.

"At that time if I had $800 or $900 in the bank I felt rich and here I was with all that merchandise in a warehouse. When I first saw it I wanted to cry.

What if I didn't sell it? What if I couldn't meet the payments? What if I couldn't make enough to pay for my travel expenses?"

Her answer was to set off across the country in a whirlwind. Seven-day weeks, 12- and 14-hour days became the rule.

But by her second year of business she had sold $350,000 worth of merchandise and she'd started to take on other products. Clearly, the would-be lawyer had become an excellent saleswoman.

Reconstructive work takes weighing

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

My left breast was removed because of cancer two years ago. I feel that I have completely recovered. I've given a great deal of thought to having a breast implant operation. My husband refuses to let me do it, even though the doctor whom I consulted thinks it is safe.

Mrs. E.B.B.

Dear Mrs. B.:

Most women who have had a breast amputation because of cancer are so happy to be alive that they accept the disfigurement with grace and psychological stamina.

This is especially true when they have the added assurance from their husbands that the operation has in no way altered their loveliness or physical attractiveness. Even though they get this assurance, many women still want breast reconstruction.

Up to 10 or 15 years ago, there was a great deal of controversy about this operation. The attitude then was "let well enough alone." Women were offered psychological support and it was felt that this was all that was necessary for them.

Today, there is a rapidly increasing number of women who think seriously about reconstructive surgery. The operations for reconstruction 10 years ago were far more formidable than they are today. In the past decade, remarkable strides have been made in the refinement of the surgical techniques for reconstruction.

These new procedures have reduced the risk, shortened the time of operation and reduced the number of days in the hospital and the postoperative period. Today, each person who has had a mastectomy is reviewed individually before a decision is made for reconstructive surgery.

The total human being is evaluated. The extent of the original surgery, the patient's age, the social circumstances and the psychological makeup are all taken into consideration.

It is apparent, therefore, that not all women who want such surgery are ideal candidates for it.

You must come to a decision only after your husband, your doctor and your surgeon have outlined for you all the risks, all the advantages and all the disadvantages.

Dear Doctor:

The tea, coffee or soup that I take can't be hot enough for me. Is this harmful?

Mr. M.A.

Dear Mr. A.:

You bet it can be. The delicate lining of the mouth and the esophagus, which brings food from the mouth to the stomach, can be severely burned. It is asking too much of the protective body mechanisms to withstand repeated attacks of such hot fluids.

Average sleeve length earns columnist's cuff

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Sleeve-wise, I have some off-the-cuff remarks I would like to address to the shirt cutters, chemisiers and haberdashers in the garment district or wherever they ply their trade.

I intend to get very shirty about the new "average sleeve length" that the industry is inflicting on the white-collar workers of North America.

The dictionary defines "shirty" as ill-tempered, which exactly fits my reaction to the way they are cutting the cloth these days in the shirt factories.

The next time I go to a department store to select the button-down Oxford shirts that are by journalism's unwritten law every columnist's trade mark, I shall become very ill-tempered if they do not have my exact sleeve length.

In fact, I shall probably blow my stack and snap my cuffs if the clerk attempts to foist off on me the average sleeve length that the New York Times said in a recent fashion report was the unavoidable coming thing.

Dress shirts as we have come to know them always were cut, sewn and sold according to exact neck size and sleeve length.

Not any more, apparently.

According to The Times, 50 per cent of the shirts made today still come in exact neck widths but are available in only two sleeve lengths: regular (32-33) and long (34-35).

Not only that, but the percentage of average-sleeve-length shirts is increasing. At Macy's for instance, nine out of every 10 shirts in stock come in average sleeve length, which probably makes New York the naked wrist capital of the world or the sleeve poppingest city this side of Baton Rouge.

The Times article quotes a Saks Fifth Avenue official as saying that retailers love the idea because it cuts down considerably on the amount of inventory a store must have on hand.

Well, I happen to be from the old celluloid collar school that thinks shirts should be made to fit the customer and not the shelves.

The Brooks Bros. vice-president in charge of cuffs said his establishment will continue to offer exact sleeve lengths along with exact neck widths no matter what the competition does.

The last time I was in Brooks Bros., bobbing about with the swells, the shirts with French cuffs came without pockets and the Oxford button-downs were not available with sleeves suitable for cufflinks.

I tried to tell the minion behind the counter that a reporter without a shirt pocket to display his arsenal of ballpoints was unarmed before his enemies. Besides which, what could I do with the cufflinks I got from Disneyland?

The clerk was as insensitive to my needs as the vice-president at the Hathaway Company, North America's oldest shirt manufacturer. He defended the new average sleeve length that now accounts for 60 per cent of the company's production with the put-down remark in the Times that "most men don't know their proper sleeve length anyway."

It just so happens that I know my own sleeve length, even if I never could get Honorable Minh, my old Saigon shirt maker, to believe it.

Minh would duly come out from behind his counter with his porcupine smile fashioned from pins sticking out of his mouth and duly measure me from wrist to shoulder and armpit to palm with the long tape measure hanging around his neck.

But when the boys in the backroom or down in the basement got around to cutting the cloth, they never could bring themselves to believe that the Big Feet — the Americans — had such long arms.

Unilaterally, they would deduct a few inches, figuring the fitter had got it wrong. Minh's shirts were fine for displaying your new watch, but with the French cuff models the cufflinks always wound up somewhere near your elbow. Even now, you can tell an old Indochina hand the minute he reaches out a hairy arm from an impeccably tailored suit.

Minh has since gone into the grocery business, otherwise his adoption of the average-length sleeve might result in a vest.

I think the whole thing is a plot to bring back sleeve garters, so the white-collar class can go around looking like Las Vegas croupiers or so many barbershop quartetes in search of an audience.

Today's younger, designer-conscious customer, says the chap in Saks' vice-presidential suite, is "more interested in trends than in a perfect fit and probably hasn't heard of the old dress rule that a well-dressed man always has one half-inch of shirt cuff exposed beneath his jacket sleeve."

Did you ever hear such guff about a cuff? I think I'll roll up my sleeves and write him a shirty letter.

youth clinic

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I am a 14-year-old female with a big problem. I know this boy, he is 16 or 17. I like him very much. I had sex with him once. I did not want to have sex, but he insisted on it. Fortunately, I am not pregnant. I feel ashamed, very embarrassed, I think he does too. He still talks to me, stuff like that.

But he's not the same. When we had sex I was scared, shy. I am a very shy person. I knew what it was all about. I was mature enough for the responsibilities. Now he likes my sister. I don't know if she likes him, but she's always trying to take him away. Some people say he still likes me, but I'm not sure. He even called me immature. I want to say hello to him when I see him, but I feel ashamed in some way.

I tried to show him that he and my sister are not making me jealous. I am not a jealous person, but it doesn't seem to be working ... I like him very much. Do you think I have a right to these feelings?

Answer: Of course you are entitled to your feelings. I can certainly understand that you may be confused about what you are feeling, and under the circumstances that is perfectly normal. You have had your first sexual experience and of course you would have feelings about that. Naturally we all hope that our first sexual experience will be with someone we love and who loves us, at least long enough so that we can feel cared for and that our sexual expression was part of a total caring.

But it sounds as if your relationship was quickls over, and then complicated by the fact that the boy you still love may be interested in your sister. I think you have a right to feel jealous, and also to feel hurt. I would worry a little that you seem to be retreating from the experience. It would be more helpful if you could say hello to your boyfriend, talk with him about anything should the opportunity arise, and generally let him know you want to be friends, you don't dislike him because he shared your first sexual experience, and in general be as honest as you can about how you are feeling. He may feel that you are not as interested in him if you are not talking to him. Try at least saying hello. You may feel better even if it doesn't make much difference to him.

Dear Dr. Cotter: Could you please tell me what exactly is "petting?"

Answer: The word means treating another being as a "pet," that is, as a treasured darling. Petting a cat or dog shows love and appreciation of the pet. Petting another human being shows love and appreciation of that person. The person, unless a baby, can pet back, and so petting becomes an expression of mutual love. It can develop into a sexual interchange, in which the pleasure of touching the other person arouses sexual desires and activity. This is usually called "heavy petting" and is just short of sexual intercourse.

Dear Dr. Powell: Several months ago my boyfriend and I had sexual intercourse. Since then I have menstruated twice but I still fear that I may be pregnant. I have heard that to get pregnant, intercourse just take place just a few days before menstruating but ours was [illegible] before and I used no protection.

I have also heard that you don't always miss your period. That is why I fear I may be pregnant. Is this true?

Answer: It is very unlikely that you are pregnant if you have been having regular periods. It is true that some women will have what they think is a period while they are pregnant. These are usually lighter and shorter so cannot be described as normal menstrual periods.

You are more likely to get pregnant if you have intercourse mid-cycle if your periods are every 28 days. You cannot rely on this timing unless you have been taught to recognize the symptoms which show you are ovulating. It means recording your temperature every day and learning to recognize the changes in the secretions from the cervix and the vagina. You need help in using this method, often referred to as natural family planning or the sympto-thermal method of birth control. You cannot rely on a calendar or counting days to tell you when unprotected intercourse is safe.

As to whether you are pregnant or not, I would suggest you go to a birth-control clinic in your area and be reassured that you are not. You and your boyfriend can go together and talk to a nurse or doctor about what did happen and what your future plans for your relationship are. One period of worry about pregnancy such as you have been through is enough.

Eye concerns studied by duo

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Women are concerned about the relationship between cosmetic use and eye health, especially if they plan to wear contact lenses, say two women who have undertaken research on the matter.

Nancy Jones and Amy Postma, students at the Pacific University College of Optometry, say no previous research on this topic has been reported. They hope to publish a paper on their study in an optometry journal.

Because they wanted to use "virgin cosmetic wearers," they selected 15 male subjects. All are optometry students sympathetic to the project, the researchers report.

Three brands of eye shadow and mascara were used — water soluble, water non-soluble, and hypoallergenic. The male subjects wore the makeup on one eye at a time. The control eye was the one without makeup.

The researchers used special cameras to take pictures of the tear film and inverted eyelids of their subjects to record the amount of cosmetics actually taken into the eye.

Their general conclusion was that there was no significant difference in the results obtained when the subjects wore each of the three types of cosmetics. However, some of the subjects reported problems with each of the cosmetics when cleaning cosmetic particles off the contact lenses.

Patch testing a must says hair color advisor

By LON WOOD

A visiting spokesman for Canada's largest hair coloring manufacturer says recent controversies over the effect of hair dyes has led to major changes in chemical content of the dyes.

"There was controversy — a cancer scare," said Evelyn Demby, West Coast consumer consultant for Clairol of Canada. "Since then, we've taken all the chemicals in question out of our products and have reformulated our permanent hair colors."

Demby, who works out of Clairol's Vancouver office, said it is still necessary, however, for men or women who dye their hair to perform strand and patch tests in advance of coloring treatment, to determine possible individual harmful reactions.

"Our products state this on all packaging," she told The Times. "If you make the tests and don't have an initial reaction, there's likely no worry about a later one."

Demby said the strand test — taking a bit of the product and applying it to a small strand of hair — determines color reaction, while the patch test — applying a dab to an area of skin on the inside arm — will determine if there will be any degree of allergic reacton.

"Some people have varied reactions because they may be out in the sun a lot, or swim in a pool with lots of chlorine — the results could be different each time. Or you can use a product for years, and suddenly your body can react chemically.

"If there is an allergy, we recommend you do not use the product at all."

Demby said the tests should be made 24 hours before planned use.

Demby

"It doesn't matter what the product — hair coloring, face cream, eye makeup — tests should be done."

Demby, a former CBC-TV costume designer, was in Victoria to lecture 100 area cosmeticians on use of her company's products. She said Clairol has a 24-hour number, 683-0840 in Vancouver, for consumers.

"If a person has any concern or problem they can call us," she said. "If it's urgent, we'll try to get back right away, or otherwise within the day."

With home permanents also on the rise, a person should wait a week and condition their hair before they put on hair color, she said.

"Now men are even doing this. And they are all in a hurry — wanting to look perfect at all times and cover the grey."

The cosmeticians, employed by department, drug and chain stores on southern Vancouver Island, met with Demby at Laurel Point Inn for two days of basic and advanced lectures on hair dyeing.

"Basically, I travel across Western Canada twice a year doing staff training for cosmeticians, trying to keep them updated on happenings, and try to relate to the consumer what is happening," she said. "As you are probably aware, women are dyeing their own hair these days and retail sales are overpowering the hair color and care market."

Despite an economic slump, says Demby, the hair color and cosmetics business has really escalated.

"A lady can always afford three or four or five dollars for hair coloring but she may skip the $100 dress and update an old one with a new accessory," she said. "And the first thing you notice in a lady is her hair. This is why hair colorings and cosmetics make a person feel good — even though they are not rich."

Victoria is the first city on Demby's 20-stop spring tour.

"The weather being so great out here we start earlier. In Toronto, things don't start happening until February or March usually," she says.

"I find Victoria a super place for people wanting knowledge. And they are groomed very well — jeans seem to have faded away and you're noticing gals in dresses and skirts."

"This has affected the hair and makeup scene and women are using brighter colors, more blonding and reds. The earth tones have become somewhat passe.

"This is reflected in fashion now, too — a lot of true colors. The disco look. Yet there is still a carefree element — especially here on the coast where there is a greater kick for fitness and sport."

Demby said 80 per cent of women are using hair coloring of some kind — whether permanent or wash out. "Men, maybe four out of 10 — you would be amazed."

the collectibles

By Ken Richardson

Before the advent of the ballpen ink reigned supreme as the only writing medium and, along with the ink, that necessary adjunct the inkwell. Actually these indispensable reservoirs have been in use for about 4,500 years. And they have been produced in an incredible diversity of shapes and sizes — in materials ranging from gold and silver to quite ordinary pottery forms. Possibly, some of the most ornate specimens date back to the 1700s; superbly crafted they typically feature embossed and ornamented trays bearing a brace of wells encased in silver sheaths, elevated quill or pen rests and a receptacle for drying powder. Later on revolving inkwells appeared, mounted on a metal frame usually cast iron; snail-shaped and with a clear glass front, they were extremely popular in the 1870s and 1880s. Another interesting style from the last century is the tea kettle of fountain inkwell, named because of its shape.

The more common bottle was produced by most major glasshouses of that period; some simple in design, others expressing great originality and exhibiting a craftsmanship vieing with that to be found in contemporary paperweights by celebrated makers. Metal inkwells were more expensive than glass when new and the Art Nouveau and Tiffany bronzes are coveted by modern collectors. Sometimes bronze was combined with glass to form intricate designs. Moulded and pressed glass wells are equally desirable. Colorful art glass has a wide following, too. Indeed, wells in colorful cut glass are at premium right now.

The value of glass inkwells is influenced by the type of glass, the pattern, condition and the name of the maker. Three-mould glass, carved with intricate patterns, sometimes bring record prices at auction. Inkwells can be overpriced so shop carefully.

The more common varieties of inkwell range from $5 to $30. A capstan pewter well with 2 lids might be valued at $60. A brass well with an Art Nouveau design glass insert could command about $27.

Where to find?

Flea markets, garage sales. Better, more valuable specimens would repose in antique stores and might surface at shows. Collectors are prone to trade and can, in any case, offer useful guidance.

Right varieties solve radish problems

jack beastall

Radish is easy to grow and most of us have sown the seed since childhood, yet it is estimated the average gardener throws away 75% of the radishes grown.

When you compliment a gardener on what appears to be four rows of turnips and are told they are radishes sown two months ago "and still hot and pithy", you realize that radishes can be a problem to some growers.

Reading the seed catalog descriptions of the different varieties we find some more possible causes of this terrific waste.

For instance, forcing varieties, those recommended for growing in greenhouse or protected coldframe, are not good for sowing outdoors in the home garden. One such variety "matures rapidly outdoors and must be harvested immediately", meaning the crop cannot be left in the ground for harvesting over a period of a two weeks.

Another is "excellent for greenhouse and carefully irrigated high land outdoors". How many gardens are on high land and carefully irrigated?

Some varieties are only for sowing in the cooler days of early spring and in the fall; others are listed as "perfect" for summer crops. The explanation is that varieties producing large vigorous seeds make good growth in cool weather, but rapidly bolt to seed as the weather warms. Small seeded varieties need warmer temparatures for germination and rapid growth, and being less vigorous the crop matures more slowly.

Unless the variety is suited to the time of year it is being grown the roots will be hot and pithy, and this can result when the gardener picks up a packet of seed without knowing the full catalog description, or the name of the variety that does best in local soils and seasonal conditions.

As usual, some varieties are just eye-catchers for marketing. Recommended for poly-bag sales is an "exceptionally bright sparkling red" and an "attractive dazzling bright red". In the home garden flavor and texture are more important than color.

Since radishes mature in 21 to 25 days, and must be harvested within a week to ten days, it is useless to sow long rows. A half metre row sown every 10 to 15 days is about all the average family can consume. Using the correct varieties, seed sowing can be done from late April until September for use in May through October, and a September sowing of winter varieties will give the first pickings in November. Add the forcing varieties for greenhouse or coldframe growing, and the family can have radishes all the year around.

My choice would be Scarlet Globe Forcing, 21 days, for the early and late sowings in greenhouse or coldframe; Champion, 20 days, a large root for the early spring and fall sowings outdoors; Scarlet Globe Special, 23 days, or Red Prince Improved, 24 days, for early and late summer sowings; and Comet, 25 days, for midsummer since it remains crisp and firm when others would turn soft, pithy, and hot.

Gardeners who have not tried the white radishes are losing out on flavor. Burpee White, 22 days, is claimed to be the best flavored and mildest radish, and that claim is justified in my opinion. White Icicle, 30 days, has tapered roots like white carrots. These are worth trying.

Winter radish, considered an essential crop in many parts of Europe and Asia, have been carefully avoided by local gardeners who seem wary of venturing into the unknown.

We have sown Chinese White, 55 days, on September 15, pulled the first roots Nov. 8, with the remains of the crop in good condition in late January. This is a large rooted white winter variety. The roots can be cooked or eaten raw, combining well with other winter vegetables.

Chinese Rose, with large round pink tinged roots instead of long tapering roots is another variety, as is Round Black Spanish, a good winter variety with a black skin.

Seed longevity is four years, so there is no waste in purchasing several varieties to suit the different seasons of the year, providing the seed stock is kept in a cool dry place.

As to food value, radishes have a trace of vitamin A and B1, and a good amount of vitamin C.

Canada a business-trip bargain

LONDON (CP) — A Financial Times survey of the world's most expensive cities puts Canadian cities well down the list.

The newspaper, which published its annual survey at the weekend, places Montreal at 37, Toronto at 52 and Vancouver at 54. Ottawa is not listed

Its survey reveals that London now is the most costly city for globe-trotting businessmen with Peking offering the best bargain.

The survey takes into account the cost of bed, breakfast and an a la carte dinner in a first-class hotel, a lunch, a snack, a whisky and a five-kilometre taxi ride.

Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, is the second-most-expensive city, followed by Paris, Frankfurt, West Germany, and Brussels. New York City in 15th place, is only 76 per cent as expensive as London.

Tokyo, rated most-expensive in the world last year, dropped to ninth place and only 87 per cent as expensive as London. The British capital has leaped from 11th place last year and 38th four years ago.

The Canadian cities were all cheaper than four U.S. cities surveyed.

For Montreal, bed and breakfast in a good hotel cost £25.50 sterling ($66.30), compared with London at £65.50 ($170.30). The price in Toronto was £21.83 ($56.75) and Vancouver £23.41 ($60.86).

Dinner in an average restaurant in Montreal was £10.96 ($28.49) compared with £11 in London (28.60). Prices in Toronto and Vancouver were £7.97 ($20.72) and £6.77 ($17.60).

Sakharov seeks trial

MOSCOW (AP) — Banished human-rights activist Andrei Sakharov once again defied the Kremlin's efforts to silence him, accusing the Soviet government of violating his "basic right to receive and disseminate information" and challenging it to put him on trial before the world.

"I am prepared to stand before a public and open court," the 58-year-old nuclear physicist said in a statement relayed to reporters Monday by his wife. "I do not need a gilded cage. I need the right to do my civic duty as my conscience dictates."

Sakharov, who won the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for his fight for human rights in the Soviet Union, was taken from his Moscow apartment last week and exiled to Gorky, an industrial city of 1.3 million people 400 kilometres east of Moscow that is off limits to foreigners because military equipment is manufactured there.

His wife, Yelena Bonner, was allowed to accompany him but returned to Moscow to deliver his statement to Western reporters. She said she wrote it according to his instructions after she reached Moscow because she feared any document she carried would be taken from her.

The statement said that Sakharov was sent away from the Soviet capital and the foreign press corps here to "untie (the government's) hands for any future repression of groups of dissidents inside the country — with less opportunity for the world to learn of them — and for further international adventures."

Tass news agency has reported the Soviet Academy of Sciences censured Sakharov, who helped invent the Soviet hydrogen bomb, and accused him of "denigrating the lofty title of Soviet scientists." The academy censured him once before, in 1973.

Meanwhile, the 220 nuclear scientists at the European Centre for Nuclear Research today cabled a protest to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev over Sakharov's forced exile.

The message said measures taken against Sakharov represent "a flagrant violation of basic human rights."

Soviet spies pose as UN employees

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States knows Soviet spies pose as international civil servants at the United Nations headquarters and has acted to ferret out and expel them, an American spokeswoman said Monday.

Arkhady Shevchenko, a Soviet undersecretary-general at the United Nations who defected in 1978, said in an interview on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" Sunday night that about half of the 600 Soviet mission employees worked for the Soviet KGB and military intelligence.

"We are aware that Soviet intelligence has successfully infiltrated the offices of the U.N. Secretariat," U.S. mission spokeswoman Jill Schuker said.

"We have monitored, and are monitoring, this situation. The State Department and the FBI has taken action to expel those who abused the privileges of residence."

Oil company '79 profits up

United Press International

Atlantic Richfield Co. Monday reported its 1979 profits rose 45 percent and Shell Oil Co. announced a 38 percent increase in earnings last year.

Arco also boosted its quarterly dividend to 85 cents a share from 70 cents a share, payable March 15 to shareholders of record Feb. 8, and said it plans to seek shareholder approval of a two-for-one stock split.

"Without adequate profits, we can neither provide enough of our own money nor can we attract the outside investment necessary to meet this country's energy needs," said Robert C. Thompson, Shell vice president of finance. "Profits don't buy as much as they used to."

Arco and Shell were the latest of the nation's biggest oil companies to disclose healthy results for 1979. The 12 large refiners reporting earnings so far have posted gains ranging from Union Oil Co. of California's 31 percent increase to the hefty 164 percent surge announced by Standard Oil Co. of Ohio last week.

Arco, ranked No. 7 among U.S. oil companies, earned $1.16 billion, or $9.48 a share, last year, up 45 percent from $804.3 million, or $6.60 a share, in 1978. Revenues rose 31 percent to $16.6 billion from $12.7 billion.

Arco's fourth-quarter profits climbed 54 percent to $342.9 million, or $2.78 a share, from $222.5 million, or $1.82 a share, in the final 1978 quarter. Revenues were up 54 percent to $5 billion from $3.2 billion.

Arco said its return on shareholders' equity — a key barometer of profitability — rose to 20.5 percent last year from 16.2 percent in 1978. The average return on shareholders' equity for all manufacturing industries was 16.7 percent for the first nine months of 1979.

Shell, the eighth largest U.S. refiner, said its 1979 earnings were up 38 percent to $1.1 billion, or $7.32 a share, from $814 million, or $5.45 a share, in 1978. Revenues advanced 31 percent to $14.5 billion from $11.1 billion.

Moslem nations condemn Russia

United Press International

The Moslem world today made its position clear on the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, telling Moscow to get its troops out of the Islamic nation.

Meeting in Islamabad, Pakistan, the Islamic Conference dealt the Soviet Union a stinging diplomatic defeat, unanimously calling for the "immediate and complete" withdrawal of Red Army forces from Afghanistan.

The 42-member organization also suspended the Soviet-backed Kabul regime from the group until a Soviet withdrawal is complete.

The blow to the Kremlin was made more stunning by the fact that such Soviet supporters as Libya, the Palestinian Liberation Organization, Algeria and Iraq joined the Moslem belt of nations stretching from the Atlantic to the far East in supporting the 11-point resolution.

It was believed to be the first time in the organization's 10-year history that Moscow was the target of its wrath.

The measure, which said the Soviet invasion threatened world peace, was supported by all 36 delegations attending the conference. The Islamic mini-United Nations represents some 800 million Moslems worldwide.

"It's an outright condemnation of the Soviet aggression and the illegal (Kabul) regime," said one bleary-eyed delegate as he emerged early today from the marathon session.

The vote came hours after the conference's political committee heard six Afghan rebel leaders ask for financial and military aide for their anti-Soviet guerrilla alliance. One point of the resolution called on member states to express their support for the Afghan people "in their just struggle."

Moslem nations were called upon in the resolution to assist the Islamic countries bordering Afghanistan in caring for the "the refugees whom aggression has driven away from their homes."

The resolution fell short of supporting a boycott of the summer Olympic Games in Moscow, but urged Moslem countries to "envision ... not participating."

In related developments:

— U.S. President Carter's national security affairs adviser Zbignieuw Brzezinski will lead a diplomatic and military mission to Pakistan and the Middle East this week to show support for American allies and discuss U.S. aid for the volatile region, authoritative sources said Monday night.

— Egyptian President Anwar Sadat told the Soviet Union on Monday to cut its diplomatic staff in the Egyptian capital to seven people from more than 50 and said all remaining Soviet industrial experts must leave Egypt.

Both moves were in retaliation for the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

— British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan "a symbol and a warning" Monday and said Britain will strengthen its role in Asia.

"We must bring home to the Russians how badly they underestimated the cost to themselves of the invasion and how serious would be the consequences should they try the same thing again," she said in a House of Commons debate.

— The Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda said Monday the Carter administration is openly proclaiming a "cult of brute force" in foreign policy and abandoning earlier commitments to arms control.

Pravda said Soviet intervention in Afghanistan is fully justified and unrest there has posed "not an imaginary but a real threat to the interests of the security of the Soviet state."

— The Seafarers International Union of Canada (SIU) said in Montreal Monday it has ended its boycott of Soviet shipping.

Kuwait joins oil price hike

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwait announced today a $2 increase in the price of its crude oil — to $27.50 from $25.50 a barrel — joining Iraq, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates in following the lead set by Saudia Arabia on the weekend, the official UAE news agency reported today.

Oil Minister Sheik Ali Khalifa Al Sabah said the new price was retroactive to Jan. 1.

Power-sharing out in Iran

United Press International

Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Iran's first president, has rejected sharing any power with hard-line militants holding 50 American hostages nearly three months as ransom for the shah's extradition.

In an interview with Le Monde newspaper published in Paris Monday, the finance minister said the hostage crisis could be resolved if the United States admitted to "crimes it had committed" during Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's regime.

During his campaign for the presidency, the French-trained economist told reporters the hostage crisis is "one of the most important problems ... I will try to resolve this crisis as soon as possible."

In Washington, in what was seen as a tentative gesture of reconciliation to the newly elected government in Tehran, the United States delayed plans to impose economic sanctions against Iran for holding the hostages.

"We remain ready to work with Iran's leaders toward a solution to the crisis," President Carter was quoted as saying in a statement released by State Department spokesman Hodding Carter.

Official election results released by Tehran Radio and monitored in London by the BBC showed that Bani-Sadr received more than 77 percent of the vote, Admiral Seyyed Ahmad Madani, his closest rival, received 2.2 million votes.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who remains Iran's supreme religious leader with the constitutional power to dismiss the president at will, was moved Monday from the intensive care ward of a Tehran hospital to a regular ward.

Syrian embassy bombed

PARIS (CP) — Two powerful explosions ripped through the Syrian Embassy in Paris today, killing one person and injuring eight, three of them severely, French police said.

One of the severely injured was a pregnant woman, the officals said. The identity of the person killed was not immediately known, but seven of the injured were embassy personnel and the eighth was a woman passerby.

The blasts, apparently caused by bombs, ripped through two floors of the embassy building, causing the ceiling of one floor to collapse, they said.

Canada harbored Americans

The Canadian Press

The Canadian embassy in Iran harbored six American diplomats for three months and then smuggled them out when Iranians were preoccupied with their elections, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said today.

She said the Americans, who were outside their own embassy when students took it over, were agricultural and consular officials and their wives.

The minister made the announcement a day after she announced that the Canadian ambassador and the remaining three Canadians in the embassy have been removed until after the hostages in the American embassy were released.

She told reporters today she did not mention the six before for fear of the lives of the hostages.

Miss MacDonald said the Americans, Canadian Ambassador Kenneth Taylor and the three others left together, using Canadian passports.

She said she knew some journalists were aware of the hidden Americans "and therefore the danger, the threat, became greater all the time."

"It was only a matter of time before the Iranians came to know about this," the minister said.

Unless the American diplomats left, "the lives of our embassy officials would be very much in jeopardy."

In Brantford, Ont., where he was electioneering, Prime Minister Clark told reporters that he informed Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau that the embassy was sheltering the Americans a week after they got there.

He told New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent this morning, a day after Broadbent had condemned closure of the embassy.

Broadbent had said the government's decision to close the embassy was an objectionable campaign tactic.

The prime minister said he did not think Trudeau's criticism about the government's lack of toughness in the Iranian situation placed anybody in the embassy in danger.

He also said given Broadbent's reputation, the New Democratic Leader would not have criticized the Clark government for electioneering on the embassy issue if he had known about the Americans.

This morning, Trudeau commended the Clark government for harboring the American diplomats.

"This is commendable action and all Canadians and myself commend this brave work."

He said it is in the tradition of Canada to help people in distress. "If it happened in Iran, we're proud of our Canadians there."

Broadbent, apparently caught by surprise, withdrew his criticism of the closing of the embassy.

Story of the Americans' escape was first revealed by Washington correspondent Jean Pelletier, in the Montreal La Presse and was at first denied by Canadian officials.

Some 50 American hostages at the U.S. embassy remain in the hands of Iranian militants who are demanding the return of the deposed shah.

The six escapers — including two married couples — were identified as consular officer Mark J. Lijek; his wife Cora Amburn Lijek, a consular assistant; consular officer Robert G. Anders; agricultural attache Henry Lee Schatz; consular officer Joseph D. Stafford and his wife Kathleen F. Stafford, a consular assistant.

U.S. officials said the six do not aceount for the discrepancy between the number of hostages the state department has said are in the embassy — 50 — and the number counted by American clergymen who visited the hostages at Christmas — 43.

In Iran, as the usual morning crowd of visa-seeking persons gathered outside the iron gates of the tightly secured embassy in a quiet Tehran neighborhood, government officials scrambled to put together a brief statement.

The foreign ministry said it had not been

PC coast guard program called window dressing

Transport Minister Don Mazanskowski announced a multi-million-dollar, 30-year program to re-equip the Canadian Coast Guard in Vancouver today but the program was immediately labelled "window dressing."

Mazanskowski told a news conference the first five-year phase of the program will cost $250 million.

The minister said there has been a deterioration of coast guard equipment and a lack of attention to renewing the coast guard fleet.

Outspoken Canadian Coast Guard volunteer agent in Campbell River, Dr. Bob Somerville, said today the minister's announcement is window-dressing and won't mean any increase in coast guard facilities.

"All they've done is taken the coast guard budget and projected it over the next 30 years. This could change with the next government," he said. "What happened with the $40 million the Trudeau government promised us?"

He said most of the money for replacement of ships would be going to the east coast, not the west.

"Our 95-foot cutters are already five years over their original estimated life. They sure as hell should start building pretty damn soon."

H.O. Buchanan, regional director in Vancouver, confirmed that this is precisely what had been done. The budget had been projected over a 30-year period and did not cover any additional equipment.

He said, however, the new program is highly preferable to the method of replacing ships in the past when the replacements were done in a "feast or famine" manner.

Manzankoski said he will be in the Vancouver area all this week, and expects to have a report on his investigation into coast guard facilities on the B.C. coast.

The investigation was called for after the freighter Lee Wang Zin capsized in a fierce storm Christmas Day off the Queen Charlotte Islands with a loss of 30 lives.

Statements made at an inquest into the tragedy have been highly critical of the coast guard, particularly relating to the time taken to act on a Mayday from the freighter and locate it.

London Times banishes 'Ms.'

LONDON (AP) — The Times of London has banished the title Ms. from its news and editorial columns, the newspaper said today.

Trevor Fishlock, writer of the regular feature London Diary, said "That forlorn, fatherless and motherless little word Ms. is cast into the lexicographical outer darkness" in the latest supplement to The Times stylebook.

"This is a rallying point for commonsense," Fishlock said. "There are several reasons why Ms. should be allowed no air.

"It is artificial, ugly, silly, means nothing and is rotten English. It is a faddish middle-class plaything, and far from disguising the marital status of women, as is claimed, it draws attention to it. It is a vanity.

"There is an important battle to be fought for all women, not just a tiny elite," Fishlock said, but that "Ms. is one of the excesses of the revolution and should be junked."

Premier pleads stadium aid

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett made an impassioned plea to the private sector today for help in funding British Columbia Place, which would include a 60,000-seat amphitheatre, in the False Creek area of the city.

Bennett told a breakfast gathering of the who's-who of B.C. business that the private sector will be expected to help carry the load in financing the project, which will be linked to Vancouver's bid to host a major international transportation exposition — Transpo '86.

The premier said cabinet agreed Thursday to proceed with the building of the amphitheatre as recommended in a stadium report presented to the government Dec. 20 by Paul Manning and Larry Bell.

The legislature already has approved expenditure of $25 million towards the development of a new major sports facility for the city, which faces the possibility of losing two professional teams unless a covered stadium is built soon.

The premier said the federal government also is expected to participate in the futuristic dream much like it did when Montreal played host to Expo 67 and entered into a cost-sharing agreement with Ottawa.

Bennett would not nail down a cost on the over-all project, which includes the amphitheatre which the premier called "a theatre for sporting and cultural events."

The stadium report released last month disclosed that the amphitheatre can be built for a minimum of $100 million, depending on extra facilities and the type of roof design.

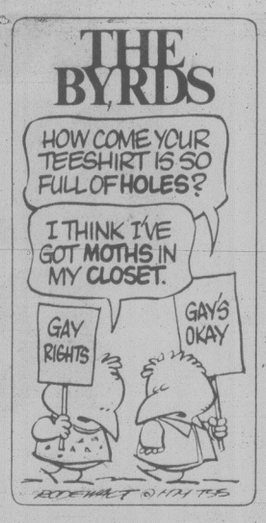
NDP MLA Gary Lauk says Bennett is just building castles in the air.

The proposed development would be in Lauk's riding of Vancouver Centre.

Lauk said he would welcome the announcement if there was anything solid behind it.

He said Bennett is raising expectations "far beyond the province's reach financially."

"He's only committed $25 million to what he calls the amphitheatre. For the rest of the project that he has sketched out, there is no financial underpinning."



New threat to Island farmland

Fertile Saanich Peninsula farmland is increasingly threatened by urban sprawl.

Warnings have been sounded for years that British Columbia — and, in particular, Vancouver Island — may find itself at the mercy of outside food suppliers if the area's small, independent farms are sold for housing and other non-agricultural development.

Now a new villain has appeared on the scene: the energy crisis, though it could prove a blessing in disguise.

In a series beginning today on Page 5, Times reporter Paul Minvielle reports that soaring fuel prices may dry up the flow of U.S. produce to the Island. That could give local growers a competitive edge, but unless government-sanctioned exclusions from the Agricultural Land Reserve are stopped, Greater Victorians may soon find themselves faced with outrageously expensive fresh garden produce — or drastic shortages.

Senate backs games boycott

Parrot begins jail term today

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean-Claude Parrot, national president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, begins serving a three-month jail term today for defying a parliamentary law.

Parrot has been free on bail since April 11 when a judge and jury found him guilty of recommending that postal union members go out on strike in October, 1978, in spite of a special act of Parliament forbidding such a walkout.

His bail was continued until he exhausted attempts to have higher courts overturn the trial decision. Those attempts ended today when the Supreme Court of Canada decided it saw no merit in reviewing the case.

Parrot, 43, was in his office at CUPW headquarters when he received news of the court's decision and said he planned to have lunch with his wife Louisette before reporting to the Ottawa-Carleton Regional Detention Centre to begin serving his term.

He said he was not surprised that the court had dismissed his appeal since the Ontario Court of Appeal had already ruled against him in a unanimous decision.

But he said the decision would do nothing to resolve festering problems in the post office.

BCFP profit tops $97M

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. has reported the best year in the company's history with net earnings of $96.7 million or $6.35 a share, compared with $69 million or $4.53 a share in 1978.

Company president Ken Benson said in a news release today that the firm had a record year in the production of pulp, newsprint and coated paper while receiving higher prices for all products.

Sales in 1979 increased by $95.9 million to $800 million.

Benson said net sales included a gain on the United States exchange rate of $89.1 million compared with $62.3 million the year before and a net contribution to earnings of $2.51 a share compared with $1.64 a share in 1978.

He said the firm took advantage of the higher earnings and spent $58.3 million on improving production facilities to prepare for future demand and reduce production costs.

Fourth-quarter earnings were $26.2 million or $1.72 a share on sales of $222 million.

Beer $5.70

It is now official: the price of beer goes up Feb. 1.

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Nielsen announced today a dozen regular beer will cost $5.10 plus 60 cents deposit, a rise of 50 cents a dozen. New prices will apply to products received in the liquor stores on or after Feb. 1.

Beer parlors will be permitted to increase the price of draft beer by a maximum five cents a glass.

The price of a quarter-litre glass of beer, which currently ranges from 45 to 55 cents, will now range from 50 to 60 cents in most premises. Licensees who have upgraded their premises may apply for a further nickel increase to a maximum 65 cents a glass.

Regular bottled beer will cost up to 10 cents more in hotels, pubs and cabarets, to a maximum price of $1.25.

Knew about probe: Murphy

VANCOUVER (CP) — A security leak may have taken the surprise out of an RCMP search of former broadcaster Ed Murphy's apartment, county court was told Monday.

S.Sgt. Ernest Brydon was testifying at the trial of Murphy and businessman Douglas Holme, charged with conspiring to offer a bribe.

Brydon said the RCMP investigation into the matter, which included bugging a cabinet minister's home, was supposed to be secret but in December, 1977, when Brydon arrived at Murphy's apartment, Murphy said he already knew about the investigation.

Brydon said when he showed Murphy the warrant, Murphy said, "I've known about this investigation for some months."

Brydon said when he asked Murphy when he learned about the investigation he was told, "In March (1977) and again in September (1977)."

Brydon was investigating allegations that Murphy and Holme conspired in 1976 and 1977 to offer then-environment minister Jim Nielsen $100,000 to use his influence to get 80 acres of Richmond farmland removed from the agricultural land reserve.

The court heard a tape-recorded telephone conversation between Murphy and Holme in which they said they expected to net $3.6 million by developing the land.

The taped phone calls included some that were indistinct and others that were laced with static. Defence lawyers Leonard Doust and Glen Orris questioned the accuracy of the Crown's transcripts and said they may challenge them in detail later.

One of the conversations as transcribed by the Crown reads in part as follows:

Holme: "We can make one hundred thousand per acre on the property that we can acquire. You and I share 36 and 36, 72 acres. We've got to get Nielsen to get it out of the land reserve."

Murphy: "Well, we can do that. Geez, that's three million, six hundred thousand apiece."

Holme: "We pay him one hundred grand to get it out and we get ourselves two million, six hundred thousand."

Murphy: "Yeah. At 36 acres apiece that's three million, six hundred thousand."

The court was told 36 intercepted converstaion said to involve Murphy, Holme and others will be introduced as evidence.

The trial continues today.

Canada harbored Americans

The Canadian Press

The Canadian embassy in Iran harbored six American diplomats for three months and then smuggled them out when Iranians were preoccupied with their elections, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said today.

She said the Americans, who were outside their own embassy when students took it over, were agricultural and consular officials and their wives.

The minister made the announcement a day after she announced that the Canadian ambassador and the remaining three Canadians in the embassy have been removed until after the hostages in the American embassy were released.

She told reporters today she did not mention the six before for fear of the lives of the hostages.

Miss MacDonald said the Americans, Canadian Ambassador Kenneth Taylor and the three others left together, using Canadian passports.

She said she knew some journalists were aware of the hidden Americans "and therefore the danger, the threat, became greater all the time."

"It was only a matter of time before the Iranians came to know about this," the minister said.

Unless the American diplomats left, "the lives of our embassy officials would be very much in jeopardy."

In Brantford, Ont., where he was electioneering, Prime Minister Clark told reporters that he informed Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau that the embassy was sheltering the Americans a week after they got there.

He told New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent this morning, a day after Broadbent had condemned closure of the embassy.

Broadbent had said the government's decision to close the embassy was an objectionable campaign tactic.

The prime minister said he did not think Trudeau's criticism about the government's lack of toughness in the Iranian situation placed anybody in the embassy in danger.

He also said given Broadbent's reputation, the New Democratic Leader would not have criticized the Clark government for electioneering on the embassy issue if he had known about the Americans.

This morning, Trudeau commended the Clark government for harboring the American diplomats.

"This is commendable action and all Canadians and myself commend this brave work."

He said it is in the tradition of Canada to help people in distress. "If it happened in Iran, we're proud of our Canadians there."

Broadbent, apparently caught by surprise, withdrew his criticism of the closing of the embassy.

Story of the Americans' escape was first revealed by Washington correspondent Jean Pelletier, in the Montreal La Presse and was at first denied by Canadian officials.

Some 50 American hostages at the U.S. embassy remain in the hands of Iranian militants who are demanding the return of the deposed shah.

The six escapers — including two married couples — were identified as consular officer Mark J. Lijek; his wife Cora Amburn Lijek, a consular assistant; consular officer Robert G. Anders; agricultural attache Henry Lee Schatz; consular officer Joseph D. Stafford and his wife Kathleen F. Stafford, a consular assistant.

U.S. officials said the six do not account for the discrepancy between the number of hostages the state department has said are in the embassy — 50 — and the number counted by American clergymen who visited the hostages at Christmas — 43.

In Iran, as the usual morning crowd of visa-seeking persons gathered outside the iron gates of the tightly secured embassy in a quiet Tehran neighborhood, government officials scrambled to put together a brief statement.

The foreign ministry said it had not been

PC coast guard program called window dressing

Transport Minister Don Mazanskowski announced a multi-million-dollar, 30-year program to re-equip the Canadian Coast Guard in Vancouver today but the program was immediately labelled "window dressing."

Mazanskowski told a news conference the first five-year phase of the program will cost $250 million.

The minister said there has been a deterioration of coast guard equipment and a lack of attention to renewing the coast guard fleet.

Outspoken Canadian Coast Guard volunteer agent in Campbell River, Dr. Bob Somerville, said today the minister's announcement is window-dressing and won't mean any increase in coast guard facilities.

"All they've done is taken the coast guard budget and projected it over the next 30 years. This could change with the next government," he said. "What happened with the $40 million the Trudeau government promised us?"

He said most of the money for replacement of ships would be going to the east coast, not the west.

"Our 95-foot cutters are already five years over their original estimated life. They sure as hell should start building pretty damn soon."

H.O. Buchanan, regional director in Vancouver, confirmed that this is precisely what had been done. The budget had been projected over a 30-year period and did not cover any additional equipment.

He said, however, the new program is highly preferable to the method of replacing ships in the past when the replacements were done in a "feast or famine" manner.

Manzankoski said he will be in the Vancouver area all this week, and expects to have a report on his investigation into coast guard facilities on the B.C. coast.

The investigation was called for after the freighter Lee Wang Zin capsized in a fierce storm Christmas Day off the Queen Charlotte Islands with a loss of 30 lives.

Statements made at an inquest into the tragedy have been highly critical of the coast guard, particularly relating to the time taken to act on a Mayday from the freighter and locate it.

London Times banishes 'Ms.'

LONDON (AP) — The Times of London has banished the title Ms. from its news and editorial columns, the newspaper said today.

Trevor Fishlock, writer of the regular feature London Diary, said "That forlorn, fatherless and motherless little word Ms. is cast into the lexicographical outer darkness" in the latest supplement to The Times stylebook.

"This is a rallying point for commonsense," Fishlock said. "There are several reasons why Ms. should be allowed no air.

"It is artificial, ugly, silly, means nothing and is rotten English. It is a faddish middle-class plaything, and far from disguising the marital status of women, as is claimed, it draws attention to it. It is a vanity.

"There is an important battle to be fought for all women, not just a tiny elite," Fishlock said, but that "Ms. is one of the excesses of the revolution and should be junked."

Stadium for False Creek

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett made an impassioned plea to the private sector today for help in funding British Columbia Place, which would include a 60,000-seat amphitheatre, in the False Creek area of the city.

Bennett told a breakfast gathering of the who's-who of B.C. business that the private sector will be expected to help carry the load in financing the project, which will be linked to Vancouver's bid to host a major international transportation exposition — Transpo '86.

The premier said cabinet agreed Thursday to proceed with the building of the amphitheatre as recommended in a stadium report presented to the government Dec. 20 by Paul Manning and Larry Bell.

The legislature already has approved expenditure of $25 million towards the development of a new major sports facility for the city, which faces the possibility of losing two professional teams unless a covered stadium is built soon.

The premier said the federal government also is expected to participate in the futuristic dream much like it did when Montreal played host to Expo 67 and entered into a cost-sharing agreement with Ottawa.

Bennett would not nail down a cost on the over-all project, which includes the amphitheatre which the premier called "a theatre for sporting and cultural events."

The stadium report released last month disclosed that the amphitheatre can be built for a minimum of $100 million, depending on extra facilities and the type of roof design.

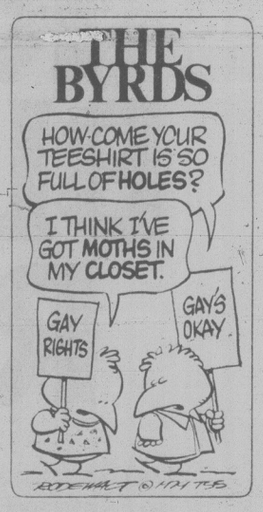
NDP MLA Gary Lauk says Bennett is just building castles in the air.

The proposed development would be in Lauk's riding of Vancouver Centre.

Lauk said he would welcome the announcement if there was anything solid behind it.

He said Bennett is raising expectations "far beyond the province's reach financially."

"He's only committed $25 million to what he calls the amphitheatre. For the rest of the project that he has sketched out, there is no financial underpinning."



New threat to Island farmland

Fertile Saanich Peninsula farmland is increasingly threatened by urban sprawl.

Warnings have been sounded for years that British Columbia — and, in particular, Vancouver Island — may find itself at the mercy of outside food suppliers if the area's small, independent farms are sold for housing and other non-agricultural development.

Now a new villain has appeared on the scene: the energy crisis, though it could prove a blessing in disguise.

In a series beginning today on Page 5, Times reporter Paul Minvielle reports that soaring fuel prices may dry up the flow of U.S. produce to the Island. That could give local growers a competitive edge, but unless government-sanctioned exclusions from the Agricultural Land Reserve are stopped, Greater Victorians may soon find themselves faced with outrageously expensive fresh garden produce — or drastic shortages.

Parrot begins jail term today

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Employees said today "it is nothing short of a national disgrace" that Jean-Claude Parrot, its national president, is in jail.

Parrot began serving a three-month prison sentence hours after the Supreme Court of Canada decided not to review his conviction of disobeying a special act of Parliament which ruled illegal a postal strike in 1978.

The union head recommended instead that workers stay off the job, a course they followed for a week before returning to work.

He has been free on bail since then awaiting the outcome of appeals against the trial decision. The rejection Tuesday by the Supreme Court exhausted all possible appeals and Parrot surrendered himself to police late Tuesday afternoon.

After hearing the court decision at union headquarters, Parrot urged postal workers not to walk off the job in protest over his jailing.

Andre Beauchamp, a union vice-president, reacted with anger to the jailing of his boss.

"It is nothing short of a national disgrace that an honest and dedicated man, such as brother Parrot, should be sent to jail."
